PWA's Public Power Loans Are Debated In High Court

Bench Questions Private Firm's Claim Grants Violate Laws.

U. S. Denies Attack On States' Rights

Public Welfare Clause of Constitution Cited as Grounds for Aid.

Arguments that the Government promoted the general welfare by furnishing money for publicly owned hydro-electric projects collided in the Supreme Court yesterday with assertions that such activity violated States' rights.

Pointed questions on Federal loans and grants came from members of the Court during the four hours of argument that ended late in the afternoon with an exchange between Newton D. Baker, power company attorney, and Justice Brandeis, celebrated liberal who will be 80, Friday.

Specifically at issue was a $2,850,000 PWA loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a plant at Buzzard Roost. Seeking to enjoin the construction, the Duke Power Co. won in the South Carolina Federal District Court but lost in the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court may rule December 7.

Baker asserted that the "inescapable consequence" of such construction is to destroy established local utilities" and that such activity exceeds the power of the State government.

Welfare Clause Cited.

Speaking for the government, Solicitor General Stanley Reed contended the purpose of the construction was to increase employment and that it was authorized by the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution.

While Baker neared the end of his rebuttal statement, Brandies, leaning forward in his chair, put this question:

"Assuming that the Government may relieve unemployment by grants for public works, do you question that the Government may, in making the grant in the first place, select that which the locality desires if it desires a municipally owned electric plant then may the Government make a grant for that purpose, although the effect necessarily is to compete with an existing private company?"

"I deny it," Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson Administration, responded. "My mind doesn't accept that as a possibility."

"Then the Government is prohibited from aiding the unemployed," Brandeis countered, "if the only way it can do so is to advance money for the purpose of municipal electric plants."

"It would be just as reasonable," the former Cabinet member asserted, "to say the Government of the United States, believing it necessary to relieve unemployment, makes up its mind to set up competing grocery

Elliott Roosevelt and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 10.—Rugged Texans who take their etiquette straight, thank you, and either stand by their kinfolk or shoot 'em, today are downright flabbergasted over a delicate question of protocol which prevents a Roosevelt from introducing a Roosevelt.

Protocol—imported from France and heretofore unknown in Texas—was invoked by slim, vivacious Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr.—an Easterner if you ever saw one—to keep Elliott Roosevelt, strapping son of the President and an adopted Texan, off the stage when she appeared at a Town Hall lecture last night.

"It would make it embarrassing for all concerned for you to appear at the lecture," wrote Mrs. Roosevelt and Mr. Roosevelt—much to the dismay of Texans who thought repeal meant equal rights—fled from the scene.

In true Texan style, Elliott, who, it seems can take his Roosevelts, or leave them alone, agreed to introduce Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts) when he was requested to do so several weeks ago by Mrs. W. M. Harrison, executive secretary of the Town Hall group.

That settled the matter so far as Fort Worth was concerned.

Mrs. Roosevelt was going to speak on "Life in the Philippines," as befits the wife of a former Governor General of the Philippines, so Fort Worth several weeks ago put the lecture down as one of The Things to Attend at which Nothing Would Happen.

Elliott was willin' and Fort Worth was waitin'.

Then young Roosevelt (of the F. D. Roosevelts) received a letter from young Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts) reminding him that her husband's political views "differed in every respect to those of your father, the President."

Well, sir, Elliott up and said he saw no reason why the fact that his father, the President, and Theodore Roosevelt, jr., differed in political views should interfere with what he considered "a courtesy to a relative and my duty as a citizen of Fort Worth."

And Texas, to a man, said, "Yea, Man!"

But them came the question of protocol!

Because Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts) added in her letter to Mr. Roosevelt (of the F. D. Roosevelts) that "it would be embarrassing to all concerned for you to appear at the lecture."

Well, sir, that stopped Elliott. He knew it wouldn't embarrass him and he knew it wouldn't embarrass his fellow Fort Worth citizens for him to introduce Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts). But she said "all concerned."

So the President's son telegraphed his relative that under the circumstances he would oblige.

Young Roosevelt (of the F. D. Roosevelts) said he then explained to Mrs. Harrison, of the Town Hall committee, that "I wanted you to know the whole story as I would not let you down with a lie, nor would I do anything to make Mrs. Roosevelt (Ed. note: of the Theodore Roosevelts) angry at your organization."

The Town Hall committee knew it faced a desperate situation and took pains to keep from Fort Worth the news that one of its adopted sons had been rebuffed until after Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts) had gone on to Dallas to lecture on "Life in the Philippines."

Mrs. Roosevelt (of the Theodore Roosevelts) met reporters in Dallas with uplifted eyebrows when they asked her about the reported rebuff to young Mr. Roosevelt (of the F. D. Roosevelts).

"I have written no letters," she said, "to the Roosevelt family for publication.

"The Fort Worth Town Hall Committee made all arrangements for my lecture. A Mr. Kennedy, whom I had never met, introduced me."

Mrs. Roosevelt, after her introduction by Kennedy, sweetly thanked him for not referring to her as "one of those out-of-season Roosevelts."

Special Relief Budget, Aim Of Roosevelt

President Also Predicts New Fund to Carry on Work Till July.

Hopes to Go to Parley in Buenos Aires; Will Decide by Sunday.

By Sidney Olson.

A separate budget for relief, and a supplementary new appropriation to carry on current relief activities until July, were predicted yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Reporters at his press conference, shelling him with a long series of rapid-fire questions, drew the following rapid-fire answers from the President:

He will know by Sunday whether he will be able to go to the Buenos Aires Peace Conference.

He has given no thought to a constitutional amendment granting Congress power to legislate social reforms.

He doesn't expect to seek any new taxes.

He'll tell the country when to expect a balanced budget in his January 6 budget message to Congress.

He wants a very simple inaugural ceremony, but will not name the chairman of the committee in charge until after his Southern cruise.

'Enjoys' Dividends.

Asked for comment on the series of pay increases and dividend-declarations in industry since his re-election, he declined comment, but when pressed by a reporter, who said "Don't you enjoy it?" he answered he did, very much.

He thinks all stories written at this time on the trend and extent of possible Government reorganization are silly, particularly since his own committee, studying reorganization needs in the Government, has not yet reported, and won't for some time.

He doesn't expect that any legislation to iron out inequalities in the corporate surplus tax law will be effective this year, as the Government needs the money, he said.

He believes the steel industry's sliding scale of wages based on the Labor Department's living cost index is a step toward a stabilized economy for workers.

He would like to work toward—not a commodity dollar, a phrase which he described as being in bad repute—but something very like it; a system in which compensation, in regard to the cost of everything, was stabilized, while the good things of life were more widely distributed, thus avoiding the criticism of the steel industry's sliding scale by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, who described it as "static misery."

He believes the Resettlement Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the relief administrations et al, will eventually and gradually be brought into the Government in the regular departments, but repeated again that "you can't write an intelligent story on Government reorganization as yet."

He said he had no immediate plans for filling the diplomatic vacancies, and remarked significantly, when asked if he were ready to appoint an ambassador to Russia, that he didn't know whether he'd fill the vacancy or not.

Pretty Good Guess.

However, William Curtis Bok, of Philadelphia, grandson of the late Cyrus H. K. Curtis, former head of the Curtis Publishing Co., has been mentioned as a possibility for the Moscow post if the President does make an appointment.

Reminded that 30 high Government positions now are vacant, some of which have been without appointees for a number of months, the President merely smiled and answered that everything seemed to be running along all right. He had previously indicated no appointments would be made until after his return from either his fishing trip or the Buenos Aires journey. This will not be until about December 13 and 14, or later.

Reporters asked if the same budgetary system followed last January, of a budget complete except for a relief appropriation, would be followed next January.

The President remarked that would be a pretty good guess, suggesting this plan was a much safer and more flexible one than that previously followed.

Will Wed Again

40 Blocks Fired By Rebel Shells In Madrid Attack

CITY'S DEFENDERS HOLD ON DESPITE 'HEAVIEST' ATTACK

Insurgent Plane Reported Shot Down; Final Attack on Entrances to Capital Believed Matter of Hours.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 10.—Flames spread through 40 blocks of the northwest section of Madrid tonight after a Fascist rebel airplane and artillery bombardment of the capital.

Fire from the rebel battery between the Campamento and El Escorial road caused severe damage to the city's defenses.

A dense pall of acrid greenish brown smoke drifted eastward over the city as a whole area became a seething cauldron of flame. Thick smoke rolled from the Norte station.

Entire Area Threatened.

The flames rolling from the military building, Capitanis General, threatened to raze the whole area near the presidential palace.

Some observers believed incendiary bombs dropped by rebel planes set off the blaze.

Dozens of shells raked the capital.

An artillery shell soared through the roof of the Cortes and landed in the press gallery. Parliament, however, was not sitting.

Push Back Besiegers.

Blasted from their narrow trenches time after time by big guns and airplanes, the ragged workers' armies clung to the capital's edges—even pushed back the besiegers from the gates and bridges.

Three giant bombers speeding low protected by 15 swift pursuit planes, roared over the city before dusk, then dived on government forces near the Toledo bridgehead.

Huge clouds of smoke and debris rose skyward as the successive detonations shook Madrid.

Fire on Trenches.

Again the planes dived, their machine-gunners pouring lead on the shallow government trenches fringing the city.

One of the attacking planes was shot down, the government reported. A German pilot of another rebel bomber, officials said, landed at Alcala de Henares and surrendered to the government.

The trenches west of the city's gates were evacuated repeatedly during today's bombardment, but the militiamen swarmed back into them as soon as the planes sped away.

Government infantry, swept to within 500 yards of the Toledo gate and Angel Bridge last night, said they had pushed back their attackers on the south a distance of 2 miles from the bridge. Furious fighting, however, raged today in Casa del Campo, the great preserves west of the city, and the defenders admitted the rebels were menacing a government military hospital filled with wounded.

To the northwest, government gunners exchanged shellfire from Aravaca across a valley with insurgent artillerymen in position at the suburb of Pozuelo. The defense council said the northwestern road, from Las Rozas to El Escorial, still was held by Madrid's men.

Under Heavy Fire.

The Montana barracks were under heavy fire as dozens of shells fell in the city throughout the day.

Nation Honors Fallen Soldiers In Rites Today

President to Participate in Services at Tomb in Arlington.

The plaintive bugle notes of a soldier's farewell will echo from the rolling hills of Arlington today at 11 a. m. while the Nation, led by its President, stands silent for a moment in reverent tribute to those who died in the War to End Wars.

Before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier throughout the day will pass the Nation's great and its humble with floral offerings and memories of the pledges of lasting peace that came with the signing of the Armistice on the eleventh minute of the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month in 1918.

President Roosevelt will arrive at the Unknown's Tomb at 10:45. While a military guard of honor stands at salute, a White House aide will place the President's wreath on the Tomb. A trumpeter in the Army Band will sound "Taps."

At exactly 11, the President will bow his head and stand silent for a moment.

In every city and hamlet throughout the Nation, citizens in all walks of life will bow their heads at the same hour. Truck drivers will park their trucks and business executives will cease dictating.

Col. Means to Speak.

President Roosevelt will leave the cemetery immediately after the conclusion of the minute of silence. His Armistice Day proclamation will be read by Col. Rice W. Means, past department commander of the American Legion in Washington, who, while a member of Congress introduced the bill creating Armistice Day.

Secretary of War Woodring will deliver the principal Armistice Day address in the Amphitheater at Arlington at 11:30 o'clock. He will be followed by Harry W. Colmery, national commander of the American Legion; which is in charge of the memorial services.

The exercises in the Amphitheater will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup.

Cabinet officers, diplomats and high ranking Army and Navy officers will be in the colorful throng at Arlington.

Planes to Carry Message.

High over the city at 2:15 o'clock two giant American Airlines flagships will broadcast messages of good will from the United States to the countries of Europe.

National Commander M. Froome Barbour of the Disabled American Veterans will place three wreaths

40,000 Troops Gather at Borders of Mongolia; Tokyo Move Seen.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Nov. 11.—More than 40,000 Manchurian and Mongol irregular soldiers today were massing at Shangtu and Pailingmiao, on the borders of Mongolia, for an invasion of the North Chinese province of Suiyuan.

Chinese said the irregulars were acting under instructions of officers of the Japanese army, and that the threatened Japanese drive for control of Suiyuan would start within ten days.

Object of the invasion is to establish a government in the province friendly to Japan and pledged to a program of co-operation with the Japanese military authorities, Chinese leaders charged.

Officials of the central Chinese government in Nanking said they were ready to resist the invasion with "all the military resources at our command." They admitted the Suiyuan fighting may be preliminary to general hostilities between China and Japan, and said China is ready to fight.

Dr. Dafoe, on Visit To Chicago, Stops Trade in Market

Off on his annual fling, the little Canadian physician who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world sped from a cocktail bar to dinner at a casino, to a theater and two night clubs.

He shook hands with the mayor, stopped the hue and cry of business at the board of trade, took in the city's sights during a two-hour automobile tour and informed a host of inquirers that Marie, Cecile, Emilie, Annette and Yvonne were enjoying "excellent health."

The smiling country doctor unwittingly accomplished the rare feat of bringing activities on the huge grain market to a standstill. His appearance on the floor was greeted by cheers from 1,000 throats. Past President James C. Murray escorted him from pit to pit. Brokers crowded around to shake his hand and pop a barrage of questions.

Many renowned personages have visited the mart, but few ever halted the bustle of the trade.

Prince Georges Suspends Third County Officer

Frank Bell, of Brentwood, Md., desk clerk at the Hyattsville police station, was suspended by Prince Georges County Commissioners late yesterday after they had heard a 21-year-old Washington youth charge he had been beaten and arrested illegally.

The commissioners adopted the suspension order unanimously after they had voted down for the third time a resolution offered by one of their number, Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, for a complete investigation of the alleged police-bonding racket. Bell was the third officer suspended by the commissioners.

The order did not make specific charges against the desk clerk, merely stating he would be suspended without pay pending the Grand Jury's study of "corrupt" practices charges.

The Magistrates Association of the county last night directed its grievance committee to present to the grand jury charges that certain justices of the peace exact ex-

Admiral Leahy Named Highest Naval Officer

Admiral William D. Leahy, commander of the Battle Force, yesterday was appointed by President Roosevelt to succeed Admiral William H. Standley as Chief of Naval Operations, highest post in the American Navy. Admiral Standley will retire on January 1.

The elevation of Admiral Leahy was part of a shift in high ranking Naval and Marine Corps officers that also will bring Brig. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps schools at Quantico, Va., to Washington as commandant of the corps, with the rank of major general.

Gen. Holcomb will relieve Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, who will be retired December 1.

Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch, now commanding Battleship Division No. 2, was elevated to the temporary rank of admiral and appointed to succeed Admiral Leahy as commander of the Battle Force, second highest command in the service.

The Navy Department announced

Soviet Arrests Reich Suspects On Plot Charge

By the United Press.

Moscow, Nov. 10.—The Soviet secret police, it was learned tonight, have arrested a number of Germans in Moscow and other cities, charging them with organizing Fascist groups.

Secret police said their investigations had exposed evidence that the Germans were attempting to disseminate counter-revolutionary propaganda. They would not reveal further details.

The "plot" ramifications were said to extend to many parts of the Soviet Union. It was reported that six Germans, several Austrians and one Swede were among those arrested.

Historical Signs On Roads Stolen; Police Aid in Hunt

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—J. Alexis Shriver, secretary of the Maryland Historical Society, asked State police aid today in tracing vandals charged with theft of more than a score of highway historical markers, valued at $100 a piece.

Shriver conferred with Maj. Enoch B. Garey, police superintendent, who assigned a detective to the case. Later, the society official asked detective headquarters here and in Washington for co-operation in the hunt.

Shriver said he determined on the action today, after receipt of a report that the signpost marking Whites Ferry, near the Montgomery-Frederick County line, had been stolen. The Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee led his troops across the Potomac at Whites Ferry prior to the Battle of Antietam.

Most of the signs, Shriver said, have been removed along southern Maryland roads leading to Washington. The depredations now have spread into Frederick County and there are indications an organized gang is responsible, he added.

PWA Head Awards Contract For Colored Housing Project

Completion of Langston Terrace, PWA low-rent housing project on Bennings road northeast, was assured yesterday when Secretary Ickes awarded a contract for $1,388,000 to Coath & Goss, Chicago construction firm.

Construction of 274 low-rent unit in two-story flats, group houses and three-story apartments for colored families will be started as soon as formal contract documents have been executed, it was announced.

Grass has been growing in the foundations for the houses for the past several months, while Secretary Ickes waited for submission of bids within the amount allocated for the project.

Only two firms submitted bids when they were first called for last August and Secretary Ickes rejected both of them because they were too high. The lowest was for $1,523,000.

At the second opening, eight bids were submitted by major construction firms with the result that the PWA effected a saving of $135,000 in the cost of the project over first bids received by PWA.

The contract covers completion of the project which covers a 14-acre site a short distance from the Anacostia River. It is estimated that approximately 700,000 man hours of employment will be created at the site.

The new dwellings will be provided with modern equipment, including mechanical refrigeration and electrical lighting. The buildings will occupy only 25 per cent o the site area, the remainder being devoted to park and recreational space.

Howard A. Gray, director of PWA's housing division, pointed out that completion of Langston will aid in alleviating housing shortage among low-income families.

The scale of rents to be charged in the new development was not revealed, but it is expected that charges will be higher than those asked by the District Alley Dwelling Authority in its Hopkins court development.

Shift of Scenery Changes Resolve Of Chef to Die

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Alexander Roth, a chef, whose father and grandfather both committed suicide at the little old family home here in years gone by, came back today from a little New Jersey town to keep a similar rendezvous with death.

He went to the old house where he had grown up, but the scenes of his childhood no longer greeted him. Gone were the old surroundings and the old faces. And although he found the old home, with the same old polished number on the door, as he stood before it, he found himself between a church on one side of the dwelling and a funeral parlor on the other. The situation was too much for him.

So Roth walked into a police station, told the sergeant what he had planned and how he had changed his mind. The sergeant locked him up and last night he spent in the Tombs, charged with violating the Sullivan pistol toting law. And everything still was new to him, because he never had been in jail before.

King Edward Expected to Wed Mrs. Simpson At His Balmoral Hunting Lodge in Scotland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, Nov. 10.—Ancient Balmoral Castle, the royal shooting lodge in Scotland, will be the scene of the wedding of King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, it is believed by those close to His Majesty.

There are many reasons for this belief, one of them being the comparative seclusion offered by Balmoral.

Mrs. Simpson is no stranger to the castle. She was the King's guest there in September, along with a number of dukes and duchesses, and from all accounts the party was a merry one, indeed. King Edward, it was reported, had his nine Scotch pipers abandon their traditional highland airs and attempt his American favorite, "St. Louis Blues."

It was Mrs. Simpson's visit to Balmoral that occasioned the first mention of her name in the court circular. London editors gasped when they saw it. Not only did King Edward mention her in the circular, but also he placed her name in the first paragraph.

A feature of the house party at Balmoral was the showing of moving pictures taken of King Edward and his American-born friend on their yachting party in the Adriatic.

Ernest Aldrich Simpson, second husband of the erstwhile Baltimore belle, was invited on this cruise, but elected to stay in London. It later developed he already had made arrangements for Mrs. Simpson to divorce him.

Upon her return with King Edward from the yachting trip, Mrs. Simpson rented the luxurious apartment in Cumberland Terrace in which she is now living. It is a mile or so from Buckingham Palace.

Published reports King Edward and Mrs. Simpson will be married in the chapel at Buckingham Palace are given little credence here. To begin with, there are serious doubts that the ceremony will be performed under auspices of the Church of England. The policy of that church with respect to the marriage of divorced persons, particularly twice-divorced persons, is seen as a stumbling block.

Whereas the Episcopal Church is the Church of England, it is not the Church of Scotland.

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 10 (AP). Mrs. Wallis Simpson was described here today as a "wonderful woman" by her former husband, Commander Earl W. Spencer, U. S. N.

The naval officer, who previously had refused any comment about Mrs. Simpson, agreed to an interview today but did not discuss her friendship with Edward VIII.

"Our marriage lasted eight years," he said. "She is most attractive and has one of the strongest characters I have ever known any person to possess. Our marriage was no more nor less than many other American marriages.

"My work began to take more and more of my time and thoughts. Mrs. Spencer's interests were more of a social and sports nature that required a more active form of life than it was possible for me to live."

Robbery Squad Seizes 30 Men In Raids Here

Suspects Taken in Pool and Beer Halls in Search for Armed Bandits.

Sweeping through pool rooms and beer joints in the Second Precinct yesterday, robbery squad detectives seized more than 30 colored men in what police described as a drive against undesirable transients thought responsible for the recent outbreak of crime.

The suspects arrested yesterday along with about 50 others seized over the week-end will be paraded before the glaring lights of a huge headquarters line-up tonight.

Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson sent out an appeal yesterday that all victims of armed bandits, footpads or pocketbook thieves within the past year be present at the Detective Bureau at 7 p. m. to make an effort to identify the men.

Thompson said that personal identification of an assailant is the major factor in convicting robbers and bandits. He said unless the suspects sign confessions there is no other way to convict guilty ones.

Lieut. John F. Fowler, supervisor of the robbery squad, and Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson, Robert J. Barrett, Eral Baker and D. D. Pittman raided several pool rooms, beer establishments and lunchrooms, rounding up the colored men. Each man answered descriptions furnished by victims in various holdups.

At police headquarters all the men said they were unemployed and stated they had been in town only a short time, arriving from North and South Carolina during the last month.

Detective Sergt. Barrett said two known confidence men, who have been sought for several weeks, were picked up. The men, he said, are responsible for flim-flams reported during the last month of almost $2,000.

Meanwhile, Albert Barclay, 208 C street northwest, manager of a gasoline station at Thirteenth and L streets northwest, was robbed of between $25 and $40 early yesterday by an amiable bandit who chatted with Barclay several minutes before the stickup.

Barclay said the man entered the station about 4:30 a. m. and entered into a conversation while he was counting cash register receipts. When he looked up after a time the man was fitting on a mask, the attendant told police.

Whipping out a revolver, Barcley said, the robber, demanding all the money in the cash register and in his pockets, threatened to kill him if he made any outcry, and then walked out.

Paul Robinson, 18, of 4 Emerson street northeast, was beaten and robbed of his week's salary yesterday afternoon by a colored man in the rear of 1317 H street northwest.

Robinson, an employe of the Washington Times, said he was attacked from behind in the alley, struck over the head and a pay envelope containing $25 taken from him.

Two foreigners stole $500 from a dresser drawer in the home of Mrs. Jenny M. Johnson, 1211 K street northwest, yesterday, when they came to inquire about renting a room.

Teachers Bar Data On Beauty Costs

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Irate Hartford teachers tonight refused to answer questionnaires asking what they spent for beauty parlor treatments and similar items to determine the cost of living for their group in this city.

The questionnaires were distributed by Dr. George D. Strayer, heading a Columbia University research unit engaged in surveying the local school system with a view to economy. The deadline passed at 4 p. m. with most of the lists unfilled.

The Hartford Teachers Council, representing more than 900 teachers, adopted a resolution asking members to fill out the questionnaires without signing their names. Teachers complained the confidential information might be used in denying them future salary increases.

Three Armed Men Rob Parish House

Pittsburgh, Nov. 10 (AP).—Three men waving pistols pushed their way into the parish house of St. Adelbert's Catholic Church today, took two watches and $88 from six persons whom they tied in the parlor, and then escaped through the rear entrance.

The men entered as Father J. Frania answered their doorbell summons. Proceeding quietly, they locked a laundress in the basement where she was at work and herded the other occupants into the front room.

Besides Father Frania, they rounded up Fathers Vincent Kuklewski and James Olko from the third floor and Housekeeper Eva Paskovitch, her sister, Mary Paskovitch, and a visitor, Viola Stetler, of Flemington, W. Va., from other parts of the house. Father Frania said all were tied, then searched.

Racing Craft Gift Reaches Academy

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—The 72-foot ocean racing schooner Vamarie, to be formally presented to the rigiment of midshipmen tomorrow, sailed into the harbor tonight and docked at the Naval Academy.

S. V. Makaroff, former captain and ordnance engineer in the old Russian navy who, with Mrs. Makaroff will give the yacht to the midshipmen, sailed the trim craft here from Oyster Bay, Long Island. A navy yard patrol boat met the schooner at Reedy Point and towed her through the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

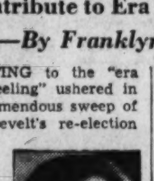
Employe Bonuses and Stocks 'Melon Cutting' Contribute to Era of Good Feeling.

By Franklyn Waltman.

CONTRIBUTING to the "era of good feeling" ushered in by the tremendous sweep of President Roosevelt's re-election victory are the rapid-fire announcements coming daily from big industrial corporations of wage increases, bonuses and melon cutting in the form of increased dividends. And this is reflected in the sharp rise of security prices with few exceptions since the election.



WALTMAN.

A prosperous nation may not always be a happy one, but it can at least be carefree, oblivious to the pinch of economic misery and the worry of what the morrow may bring. Consequently, the distribution of corporate largess, to shareholder and to worker, means a more happy outlook on life and less of a tendency to grouch over President Roosevelt and the New Deal, on the one hand, and the industrial barons, money lords and economic royalists, on the other.

To a nation weary of hearing discussions about the depression, cure-all nostrums, warnings of catastrophic disasters ahead and of politics, news of wage increases, increased employment, fatter dividend checks and large earnings, afford a welcome relief for daily conversation. Psychologically we all must feel better as a result of such news and public morale is not an unimportant factor in establishing recovery.

* * *

These actions of the last few days are being subjected to various interpretations by the man on the street, casual conversation reveals. One believes that it is a manifestation of confidence in President Roosevelt and the future—and another wonders whether such announcements would have come if Gov. Alf M. Landon had been elected President last week.

Still another expresses his suspicion that the crafty industrialists deliberately held back these good tidings until after Election Day to deprive the President of credit for them and, if Gov. Landon were elected, to create an atmosphere of confidence as a result.

And still another, a rugged individualist, perhaps, contends that politics has nothing whatever to do with it, that the President's re-election is not responsible and that the industry and business of this country are not dependent on the policies of the Federal Government, except in times of crises. It would be the same at this particular period if there had been no New Deal, says this one.

This is all interesting chatter and in general devoid of bitterness. The average man is quite willing to let Mr. Roosevelt have the credit for priming the pump and getting things moving again—indeed the election figures show an overwhelming majority of the country is willing to let the President have that credit. Let the economists and the statisticians seek the whys and wherefores, asserts your average man, so long as he has a job and has money in his pocket.

* * *

The experts, who frequently quibble over such things, assign many causes for what is happening. They do not profess to know what was in the minds of the industrialists who are now cutting the melons, but they point out that such announcements usually come around the middle of November when the earnings of the remainder of the year can be anticipated.

The money being distributed under the announcements of the last few days, however, was earned before the election, or at least, the prospects of such earnings became visible before the election. Thus, assert your experts, what is happening now undoubtedly would have happened if Gov. Landon had been elected.

Many factors have contributed to the ability of the automobile companies and other industrial units to grant bonuses and pay increased wages and extra dividends, explain the cautious experts. New Deal spending, they assert, played a part; the inventiveness, ingenuity and initiative of the industrialists and their workers played another; the great resources of the country and the indomitable courage of the people during the worst of the depression was a third part. It all added up to restoration of confidence.

Does the manifestation of such confidence on the part of industry indicate a healthy future ahead for the country? Not necessarily, assert the experts, for great industrialists and financiers have been most confident when they should have been most cautious, as in early 1929. But, they add, the immediate outlook is bright. The clouds rapidly are drifting away.

In the first place, explain the experts, the business momentum which the country has been experiencing has been fairly well equalized throughout the economic structure—a healthy sign. Improvement has been felt in the capital or durable goods industries as well as in the consumer industries. Agriculture has moved ahead with industry. The railroads are beginning to see the sunlight. The West has been moving forward just as the East has been.

Can governmental policies accelerate or hinder this movement very much? Both, reply the experts. Unwise tampering with levers of credit might greatly increase the speed of the movement. On the other hand, it may be retarded by injecting elements of uncertainty into the picture through too great a delay in balancing the budget. Continuance of easy money conditions, particularly in the financing of low-cost housing, will contribute to further improvement in the durable goods industries, where it is necessary to absorb existing unemployment.

Taken all in all, even the hard-boiled experts assert it looks like a merrier Christmas this year than any since 1928. To that the retail stores say "amen," as the National Retail Dry Goods Association reports that there exists "a genuine belief among merchants that consumer spending will now be unleashed in full force for a tidal wave of holiday spending."

Football Players Choose 'Licking' To Save Big Game

By the Associated Press.

The switch landed on football squad members, willingly taking their "three licks"—punishment for playing hookey—so they would be ready for tomorrow's "big game" with Lufkin.

This is how it came about:

Last Friday the Nacogdoches first team decided to pick up a few football pointers at a college game. Principal C. K. Chamberlain objected to the plan, but the team skipped afternoon classes anyway.

When the students returned to school yesterday each confidently armed with a note of "excuse" from a parent, a surprise awaited. Principal Chamberlain wouldn't recognize the excuses.

Instead he gave the students their choice of "three licks" with the hickory, "staying in" Saturday or suspension until Thursday. They scorned the first two and chose the suspension.

Then someone remembered the Lufkin game was scheduled for Wednesday. The suspension would make practically the entire first team ineligible.

So the boys relented, the hickory stick went into action and the full team will be on the field tomorrow.

Lawrence Letters On Exploits Bring $500 at Auction

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 10.—Letters revealing sidelights on the tragi-glamorous life of Col. T. E. Lawrence, the "Uncrowned King of Arabia," were sold for $500 at auction today.

"I wasn't a king or a prime minister," Lawrence wrote, in one of his letters to Ernest Thurtle, New York-born member of the British Parliament, "but I made 'em and played with 'em—and after that, there wasn't much more in that direction for me to do."

In another passage, Lawrence described what he called his "abnormality" which caused him to retire, at the age of 35, and seek a hermit-like refuge "far from the madding crowd" in the lonely heath country of Dorsetshire.

Lawrence had his own bitterly evolved formula for monetarily successful literature:

"To earn money by writing, you must tickle the public below the belt," he commented, in a letter which brought $97.50, highest price of the collection.

Two Policemen Cleared Of Misconduct Charge

Charges of conduct prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the force were dismissed against two policemen yesterday by a police trial board.

The men acquitted, Privates William Melvin and Homer Pearson, of the Ninth Precinct, were charged after they are alleged to have maltreated William Marshall, colored, 25, of 819 Ninth street northeast, a prisoner.

Unguided youth, easily swayed by temptation, is contributing to a major portion of the Nation's crime problem, according to Earl Stanza, president of Optimist International, who yesterday addressed a luncheon meeting of the Washington Optimist Club in the Mayflower Hotel.

Outlining the Optimist boys' work program, Stanza urged members of the local organization to join the Nation-wide rehabilitation movement by offering aid to underprivileged and delinquent boys in Washington.

"We must assume responsibility of these boys," Stanza said. "We must give them the chance they deserve to become good citizens. It is an economic as well as humanitarian problem."

He cited the annual cost of crime in this country and pointed out that by guiding unfortunate boys to better things the club would be offering a partial solution to the problem of crime control.

Last year, Stanza declared, Optimist International contacted and offered aid to 50,000 youngsters in the United States and Canada.

"Unless something is done to start these youthful citizens on the road to right living, they will become a problem of the community. We must make a few sacrifice hits and send these boys across the right base."

Stanza, who came here from St. Louis to address the local club, was introduced by Henry Schaffert, former president of Optimist International.

A group of 24 workers who are training for field duty with the Social Security Board, were guests of the club. Stanza was entertained last night at a supper-dance in the Shoreham Hotel.

Briton Envisions Traps for Planes

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 10.—A plan to trap attacking airplanes in huge nets strung between balloons around London was disclosed tonight in the House of Commons by Sir Thomas Inskio, minister for defense coordination.

While Inskip did not elaborate on his "balloon trap" plans, it was understood the British government was making extensive research along that line.

Aviation experts have declared it almost impossible to protect the whole of London in such manner, but have held it likely the Thames Estuary and other key points such as arsenals could be screened off.

First Lady 'Slur' Modified in Show

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP).—The skit in the musical revue, "New Faces," featuring portrayals of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, will go on.

The sketch, which caused a furore in the opening of the revue in Philadelphia last night and was banned by Mayor Wilson as "a damnable outrage," was back on the boards tonight—but with modifications.

The mayor told Martin Jones, the producer, and his attorney, Francis Biddle, a friend of the Roosevelts, at a conference late today that lines in the skit weren't so bad.

But the manner of the actors, depicting Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Hoover addressing a meeting of Girl Scouts, he said, was highly objectionable.

Biddle, former chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, came from the conference with the announcement that "it was agreed that the performance of the play should go on with the understanding certain caricaturing of Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Roosevelt would be modified.

Skit Removal Attacked.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—A telegram protesting the projected removal of a skit on Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt from the revue, "New Faces," was sent to Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, tonight by Prof. Hatcher Hughes, of Columbia University, chairman of the National Council on Freedom From Censorship, an affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"Vigorously protest unwarranted censorship of 'New Faces,'" the telegram read. "Libel laws are adequate check on scurrilous attacks. Legitimate political satire should not be subject to official interference."

The telegram was co-signed by Mrs. Elmer Rice, wife of the playwright and secretary of the council.

French Plan to Spend 879 Millions on Arms

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP).—France will spend more than 19,000,000,000 francs, or approximately $879,700,000, on national defense in 1937, it was disclosed in budget figures made public tonight.

The giant expenditures are nearly 50 per cent more than this year's outlay.

A large sum of the increase will go toward the building of extensive new fortifications on the Belgian frontier and increasing the number of planes in the air force by 50 per cent.

Rebels' Army Is Pushed Back From Madrid

trenches was disastrous, leading observers to believe that the final attack on the entrances to Madrid's streets tonight was but a matter of hours.

Off to one side a Moorish cavalry regiment stood poised as if impatient for the final order to attack Madrid's gates.

Hold Foes at Bay.

The stubbornly resisting government militia apparently held their foes at bay with a deadly scythe of machine-gun fire in the Casa del Campo sector—a battlefield that once was a game preserve across the Manzanares River from the old royal palace.

The clamor of battle rolled over the city, now jammed with reinforcements from other battle areas.

The government ordered all persons not actually engaged in the defense of the city to turn over their arms to the government within 24 hours under penalty of being shot as traitors.

This was interpreted as a move against what the government calls "the phantom fifth column" of rebel sympathizers within Madrid who have been sniping at the government forces.

Funds Still Needed To Aid Burned Girl

Generosity of readers of The Washington Post has assured Miss Dorothy Fenwick, 21, innocent victim of a quarrel between her mother and stepfather, of the special, nursing care necessary if she is to win her courageous fight for life.

Contributions totaling $54 have been made by Post readers toward a fund to provide the young girl, who was critically burned last month, with special day and night nurses at Gallinger Hospital.

But this fund soon will be exhausted, Miss Fenwick's sympathizers pointed out yesterday, because it cost $12 daily for the special nursing care.

Miss Fenwick was burned on the body, face and hands when a jar of gasoline hurled by her mother at her stepfather crashed against the stove on which she was cooking breakfast.

In constant pain and unable to cry out or ring a bell when she needs help, Miss Fenwick must have a nurse by her bedside at all times to moisten her bandages with soothing lotions.

Mistaken for Bear, Man Killed by Hunter

Suffolk, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Mistaken for a bear, John Skeeter, colored, was fatally shot today by Paul Jones, of Phoebus, while hunting in Dismal Swamp.

Jones was charged with involuntary manslaughter and released on bond.

The victim, wearing a black coat, was moving about in the bushes when the hunting party, of which Jones was a member, came within range. Jones fired with a charge of buckshot. Skeeter died 20 minutes later from wounds in his chest.

Inquiry Into Case Of 4 Castaways Faces Legal Snags

By the Associated Press.

Legal difficulties tonight threatened to block the Government's projected investigation of a story told by four stowaways, one a Washingtonian, Rothwell Burke, of being cast adrift on the caribbean Sea with only a loaf of bread and a bottle of water to keep them alive.

At the Justice Department, attorneys expressed doubt that the freighter's captain could be charged with a Federal violation.

"There are many crimes on the high seas for which we have no laws," one attorney said, "and in this case the crime, if there was one, was as uncommon as it was uncommonly bad.

"If the castaways had been members of the crew the case would have been very different, but legal rights of stowaways are problematical."

Another Federal attorney said the Justice Department would act only on the recommendation of A. Cecil Snyder, United States district attorney at San Juan, Puerto Rico. No recommendation from him was received yesterday.

Woman, Charging Desertion at Depot, Asks Maintenance

Charging her husband left her at the Union Station, where he directed that she might go to a nearby hotel after he divided their baggage, Mrs. Helen Powers Scala yesterday asked District Court to award her separate maintenance from Dr. Norman Philip Scala, throat specialist.

She claimed that they returned from a European trip after having been married only three months, when her husband said he did not intend to live with her. He separated his baggage from hers, gave her $10 and since then has sent her only small sums, she said. The couple were married in the Georgetown University Chapel last May.

Mrs. Scala, professing to know nothing about the cause for her husband's actions, said all went well on the trip. He owns much property and has a lucrative practice, she said. Attempts to effect a reconciliation have failed, the petition read.

Nye Will Push 5-Point Plan For Neutrality

By the Associated Press.

Describing Europe as a "tinder-box" where war might flame at any moment, Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee, announced yesterday he will press for enactment of a broad five-point neutrality program in the next Congress.

To be embodied in three bills and two proposed constitutional amendments, the program is intended to plug the gaps in present neutrality laws, put warfare on a "pay-as-you-fight" basis, and end wartime profiteering.

It will call for stringent regulation of arms manufacture, he said, because "the DuPonts and other munitions makers refused to co-operate with the Government in the last war."

Nye said he will seek nationalization of a large part of the munitions industry, adding that he believed "a strong block of liberals" in both Houses would support his program.

While Nye was discussing his plans, restrictions on exports of latest-type American war planes were announced yesterday by President Roosevelt, after a conference with high Army and Navy officials.

He ordered an embargo on foreign sales of new military aircraft until one year after the second consignment has been delivered to the Government.

The order was issued under the espionage act, forbidding the delivery of military secrets to other nations. It was expected to delay reported plans of Great Britain to purchase large numbers of American planes.

Nye said he will ask the next Congress to buttress the present neutrality law with a "mandatory embargo," automatically forbidding loans or munition sales to warring nations from the hour hostilities break out.

As it now stands, the act imposes an embargo wherever the President finds a state of war existing.

A "cash and carry plan," forcing belligerent countries to transport all American purchases in their own vessels, will be included in his proposal, Nye said.

He announced he was drafting two additional bills:

1. To take the profits out of war by limiting personal incomes to $10,000 and corporation returns to 6 per cent for the duration of the conflict.

2. To nationalize plants making guns, explosives, gas, armor plate, and warships, and to provide rigid control over manufacture of other munitions.

As a "groundwork" for the peace program, Nye said he will propose two constitutional amendments.

"One will authorize the conscription of factories and dollars during war time as well as human lives," he said. "The other will provide for a national referendum before the Nation can engage in any foreign war."

Babcock Fined On Intoxicated Driving Charge

Former A. F. G. E. Head Pays $150; Denies Memory of Chase, Collision.

With a half-empty whisky bottle as the prosecution's "Exhibit A," E. Claude Babcock, former president of the American Federation of Government Employes, was found guilty of drunken driving and colliding yesterday at a hearing before United States Commissioner J. Barton Phillips in Alexandria.

He was fined a total of $150—$100 on the drunk driving count and $50 on the colliding charge.

Pleading not guilty to the accusations, including an additional charge of leaving the scene of an accident, Babcock testified he "didn't remember a thing."

He was arrested October 31 on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway following a four-mile chase by Alexandria City police.

"His car," testified Policeman J. F. Shawhan, one of the arresting officers, "traveled between 78 and 85 miles an hour during the entire chase. We almost overtook him once, but he pulled away from us."

Rounding a turn in the road, it was testified, Babcock's car sideswiped another machine. Policeman Shawhan told of seeing a cloud of dust when the cars collided and as the chase continued, the air was filled with the odor of burning rubber. The side of Babcock's machine, Shawhan said, was "torn off" and the front fender was bent against the tire when the officers finally brought it to a halt.

"What was Babcock's condition?" asked Commissioner Phillips.

"I'd say he was intoxicated," replied Policeman Shawhan, adding: "We found a whisky bottle in his hip pocket."

"Yes, sir," answered Shawhan.

Policeman E. B. Cullember, who was riding with Shawhan in the police car, said Babcock apparently "didn't have control of himself."

"I drove him to the police station," Cullember testified, "and he told me he wasn't driving the car and that somebody collided with him."

Testifying in his own defense, Babcock said he was subject to periods of memory lapses due to injuries received during the World War.

"I have a complete blank memory of the whole episode," Babcock declared. "I don't recall ever seeing these gentlemen (the policemen) before nor do I recall ever seeing that bottle before."

Prompted by his attorney, Raymond Gittelman, Babcock said he didn't even remember going to his office the morning of the arrest.

In imposing the fines, Commissioner Phillips said he was convinced that Babcock was under the influence of intoxicants and collided with the other car. He dismissed the charge of leaving the scene of an accident commenting:

"That was probably due to his condition and not any wilful intention of getting away."

Asked for a statement after the hearing, Babcock said:

"You heard my testimony—that was the truth. It was a case of malady and not intoxication."

Plane Propeller Kills 3.

Moscow, Nov. 10 (AP).—The government announced today three persons were killed and at least eight injured November 7 when an army airplane propeller whirled loose and fell into Red square. The airplane coasted down safely. Details of the accident were not made public.

Early Birds Tweet, Ten Guests Tie on Bibs, Magician Performs and 'Happy Days Return'

Card Tricks, Stunts Fail to Impress Newsie, Long Early Riser.

"This is the way Early Birdies sing, Tweet, tweet, tweet, tweet, tweet!"

At an hour seldom thought of by Washington hosts for entertaining—8 a. m.—the Early Birds breakfast Club put white oilcloth bibs on ten somewhat startled special guests at their weekly morning get-together yesterday at the Willard.

After their opening ode, which goes on at length in the same cheery strain as the above-quoted lines, accompanied by wide grins, wise-cracks and blackslaps, breakfast was served and a magician appeared from behind a coffee cup and did card tricks.

The special guests included a milkman, newsboy, messenger, railroad engineer, policeman, farmer, etc., men who get paid for early rising. The club members get up early because they like to. They all feel fine before breakfast.

To a permanent nonmember being paid to observe the affair the magician was barely discernible in the strange early morning light. His cards, flitting handkerchiefs, little boxes and disappearing coins were entirely invisible, enveloped in a haze of cigar smoke, shouts, catcalls and general merrymaking.

One of the high spots of the morning was tuning in Arthur Godfrey on the radio and listening to his greetings to the club.

J. P. Muth, news"boy" who has been selling papers 40 years, known to many of his admirers as "Andy Gump," almost put his eye out several times drinking coffee with a spoon in the cup. Andy Gump Muth seemed rather bewildered, and even frankly bored, with the proceedings. He read his menu over and over during the lighthearted quipping of Frank Romer, who acted as master of ceremonies, and then sat with his unusually shaped head in his hands, lost in thought.

Romer's jokes brought howls of delight from the breakfasters, and a few hecklings. As he introduced C. J. Lomax, a conductor with the Capital Transit Co. for 27 years, he beamed "We want to do everything fair, and here is a man who is fare conscious." For Fireman George C. Bowie he said, "Where there's smoke, there's fire." Milkman Willard B. Upright drew a remark about "the milk of human kindness," and Farmer Elmer A. Reuling was introduced with "I hope it rains pitchforks."

J. P. MUTH, alias Andy Gump.

On the raised speaker's table were all the emblems of the society, an alarm clock, a gavel and a skillet to pound with it, a lifesize statute of a crowing cock, and other symbols of the early bird.

Numerous prizes were given away by members to each other. Florist Blackistone won a box of flowers, Chris Jacobson won a pair of old shoes, one man drew a can of paint, Dr. Harold D. Hertford got a pink birthday cake and a serenade of "Happy Birthday to You," and Dr. Marion Forbes had a raw dead turkey thrust into his hands.

One of the best known Early Birds seems to be Bill Werber, the ball player who sells insurance, who was referred to by Wisecracker Romer as "the gentleman from the 'Umpire' State," a jest which in all fairness to the membership must be said to have pulled as many groans as laughs.

James E. Colliflower distributed blotters advertising his coal, Hugh Reilly passed out handbills mentioning his superior paint and sundry folders and pencils which blanketed the tables called attention to oil burners, insurance, wire, automobiles, etc. No newspapers, traditional consort of coffee, were allowed.

Kenneth H. Sheelor, secretary of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, prefacing his act with the statement, "It's an ungodly hour to be doing tricks," caused the Early Birds to miss a lot of worms yesterday. He kept them at table until 9:30.

When he finished, the closing ode was roared in unison:

"Happy days, it's time to sing,
the Early Birds can now take wing.
"All full of pep an' everything—
happy days are here again.
"We've had our eggs, we've had our ham;
We've had our pancakes full of jam;
"And coffee too—hot-dickety-dam—

10 Ball Players Ask Clemency for Slayer

New Orleans, Nov. 10 (AP).—Ten members of the Cleveland Baseball Club of the American League joined a group of citizens here today in a request for clemency for Hugh A. Cannon, convicted slayer awaiting execution.

The baseball players headed by Steve O'Neill, manager of the Cleveland Indians, addressed a letter to the State Board of Pardons asking commutation to life sentence for Cannon.

Some of the ball players said they had known Cannon for 20 years since he was captain of bellboys in a Cleveland hotel.

Cannon is a former race horse trainer. Police records show that he fatally wounded Mrs. Minnie Jackson and her sister, Mrs. May Kelly, wounded the latter's daughter and then shot himself during an argument in his boarding house here.

Cannon lost his appeal to the State Supreme Court.

In addition to O'Neill the baseball players signing the petition were: Mel Harder, Dennis Galehouse, Lloyd Brown, Clint Brown, Joe Vosmik, Lefty Weismann, George Blaeholder, John T. Allen and George Uhle and Gordon Cobbledeck, sports writer.

Gen. Rydz-Smigly Becomes Marshal

In a gala ceremony, the former inspector general called by many "Pilsudski's political heir," was presented with a silver baton elevating him to the rank of marshal, the second man in Poland's history to hold such a rank.

Informed observers, who for some time have predicted Rydz-Smigly's rise to power, expressed belief that the first task confronting him would be to try to smoothe over the strained relations between Germany and Poland in the free city of Danzig.

Brother Is Indicted In Insurance Slaying

Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 10 (AP).—Lester B. Slack, of Bristol, was indicted today on charges of first-degree murder in connection with the poison death November 3 of his brother, Elgy Slack, of this city.

Police have said Lester Slack confessed putting poison crystals in wine, hoping to collect life insurance money on his brother so he could marry.

Safety Stressed As Auto Show Opens in N. Y.

Trailers Have Whole Floor at Exhibit; Innovations Are Lacking.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10—The biggest auto show of them all opens here tomorrow for the annual week's display of the newest and finest of the industry's products.

All over town rolled the automobiles tonight—into Grand Central Palace, where the thirty-seventh annual National Automobile Show has its headquarters; into hotel display rooms in Times Square and on Park avenue, where independent shows are held; into a huge salon on Lexington avenue; into the showrooms of upper Broadway's automobile row.

With them rolled the trailers, newcomers this year but already so popular that a whole floor has been set aside for them in the big show.

Startling innovations are lacking. It appears to be a year of consolidation, of perfecting devices already invented.

Although speed is not stressed—the wise men say any car will go faster than any sensible person cares to drive it—the new cars are more powerful than before.

But the most significant feature of the 1937 car is found under the head of increased safety.

On some cars there are no projections whatever on the dashboard. The pretty knobs and cranks are recessed and flush with the remainder of the panel.

There are electrical gear shifts worked by a key under the wheel because engineers figured it would be wise to have the driver remove his hands from the steering wheel as little as possible. Door handles have been curved so there is no projection. Some door locks automatically tighten once there is any contact at all. The backs of front seats are padded with live rubber.

An attack has been made on the danger of heavy snow and sleet on the wind shields by means of vents in the top of the instrument panel through which warm air carried from the car heater flows directly over the glass.

The passenger automobile exhibits alone will represent 20 American makes and 5 British, with about 200 complete cars and chasses.

Williams Hops Off To Hunt Redfern

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Lee Trenholm, press representative for Art Williams, former Army pilot, reported the aviator took off from Teterboro Airport, Hasbrouck Heights, N. Data on Police Killings Again Asked by Jackson Demands for access to records of the District coroner's office were renewed by Gardner Jackson, representative of the American Civil Liberties Union, after authorization was refused by the Commissioners.

In a letter to Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, Jackson again requested permission to see records of cases involving 20 persons killed by policemen or special officers since March, 1933. An opinion by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal referred Jackson's request to Dr. MacDonald after the Commissioners had been asked to grant authorization.

Dr. MacDonald said last night he will not act on the request until he had conferred personally with Jackson.

Witnesses Attack Hargrave's Sanity

Chatham, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Swifter progress was made today in the suit brought by Mrs. Maggie Cherry to invalidate the will which John Hunt Hargrave made in 1932 disposing of $300,000 in property and cash.

Mrs. Jessie Purnell and Miss Sallie Tate Cherry, nieces, both testified that in 1932 Hargrave's mind was not good. Miss Cherry said that on Christmas Day, 15 days before the will in question was drawn, he gave her as a Christmas present an empty milk bottle wrapped in a neat package.

All of this testimony is being offered to sustain the complainant's contention that Hargrave was not of testamentary capacity when he made the will. The defense contends he was in good mental condition.

A. B. C. Aide Refuses To Address Brewers

Richmond, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board declared today to allow G. Stanley Clarke, Assistant Attorney General attached to the board, to speak tonight at a meeting of the Virginia Malt Beverage Association on the ground that A. B. C. authorities could take no part in an organization of brewers.

Clarke, after learning that the purpose of the meeting was to combat "the tide of public sentiment" which "has begun to turn against the liquor traffic," declined of his own accord and said he had misunderstood the purpose of the meeting or had not been correctly informed.

stores in competition with those already established."

Earlier, Justice Sutherland had asked if the county could construct such a plant if the money were loaned by a private bank, and Justice McReynolds had inquired if the Government loan would be objectionable if made to a county in which no private utility was established.

W. S. O'B. Robinson, Baker's associate, who was speaking at the time, said he believed Duke could not object in either event.

Robinson asserted that the proposed construction was "illegal, unlawful and inflicted special injury by setting up subsidized Government competition which would take from the petitioners their business."

"It was admitted the project would be a purely local municipal plant," he added. "The county would assume no obligation. The Government would provide all the money."

He said the rates were fixed below those of the power company "by reason of the Federal subsidy," and that without this the project could not be constructed.

"One of the principal purposes of the project," he said, "is to coerce and force private companies to reduce their rates."

Justice Brandeis asked if a wealthy individual gave the county money "would Duke have a cause of action to prevent construction."

"Obviously not," Baker replied.

"Whatever vice there may be in this transaction," Brandeis added, "arises from the fact that it is the Federal Government and not a private individual making the gift.

* * *

"If you cannot enjoin a gift from a wealthy individual isn't it because you have no right in the nature of protection against competition?"

Baker said the circuit court at Charlotte, N. C., had so decided but he disagreed.

Reed, veteran Supreme Court warrior in behalf of New Deal legislation, contended the Federal and State governments had co-operated to relieve unemployment and that no rights of the States had been violated.

"States were benefited because the Federal Government was spending to aid general welfare. The Federal Government was not attempting to subverse States' rights."

He also contended there had been no improper delegation of legislative power to the President and denied contentions of his opponents that the purpose of the construction was to compel private utilities to reduce rates.

Mount Alto Veterans Turn Clock Back to '18; Agree War Is Hell, Offer a Prayer for Peace

Injuries of U. S. Heroes Are Living Argument Against Battle.

It is another Armistice Day and the veterans in Mount Alto Hospital, much as they'd like to forget the things they felt, heard, saw, smelled and tasted at the front, are turning back the clock 18 years.

Whether you talk to Harry P. Mills, who is in bed for a mere three weeks, or Harry C. Snideman, who is "waiting for a spot in Arlington," or any of the other 311 patients, you may be sure their remembrances have spawned a common conclusion: War is hell!

Not that they are bitter. With all their useless arms, gassed lungs and sightless eyes, for the most part they are not grown morbid and resentful. They are proud to have served their country, but fiercely hopeful this generation and coming generations will be spared the horrors of war that wrecked their lives.

A half dozen of these Mount Alto patients, selected purely at random, yesterday related, in a disinterested, routine manner, some of their experiences "over there." But when the conversation veered to America's future wars, they became grim and their eyes shone with the reformer's glint.

"If the citizens, especially the younger ones, would all go into a veterans' hospital and look about them they wouldn't be so anxious to look for someone to shoot when the band began to play," said Carl C. Luedeking. "I hope this peace conference in South America will go far toward ending war."

Mount Alto Freshman.

Luedeking, a chemist whose father once taught that subject at Washington University of St. Louis, might be called a Mount Alto freshman. He was "enrolled" only a week ago, coming here from his home in Buffalo to seek relief from wounds that have plagued him the last 15 years.

He was gassed twice, nicked in the leg by a machine gun bullet, his head punctured in several places by shrapnel and both legs painfully torn by barbed wire. Yet, to outward appearances, he looks hale and hearty, though you might notice his hands are so arthritic they cannot hold a pencil properly.

As was the case with many others, war was just so much beer and skittles when he enlisted in St. Louis in 1917. His outfit was the Thirtieth Engineers, also known as the First Gas Regiment.

He went overseas in December, and doggone if he had been at the front more than a couple of hours when a message from the Boche knocked off his tin hat and peppered his pate with shrapnel. That happened near Vimy Ridge.

The doctor at the dressing station said he'd better be shipped to a hoppital at the rear, but Luedeking refused. At Armentieres he picked up the machine gun bullet, a lungful of gas and the barbed wire. He can't understand how he escaped additional injuries when the English hospital where he was a patient was bombed.

Back on Hi Feet.

By August he was back on his feet but unfit for front-line duty. So they sent him to the chemical service center near Chaumont. On Armistice Day, he recalls, he was walking in from the fields with an unexploded shell over his shoulder when the arsenic gas inside let go.

Within a few minutes his face was swollen to a grotesque size, but, fortunately, his eyes were unaffected. Sick as he was, with only his eyes visible in a sea of bandages, he joined that day's wild celebration in Chaumont.

"Fini la guerre!"

"Hooray!"

During the next ten years he picked seven or eight chunks of shrapnel out of his head as 'ney made their way to the skin surface. Only recently have his leg injuries begun to heal. He is subject to fainting spells and his lungs are not the best. He spent a young fortune with private physicians and private hospitals before entering the veterans' hospital at Batavia, N. Y., early in the year. Batavia is not far from Buffalo, Luedeking's present home, where a wife and four children await his return.

He thinks the expert treatment he received at Batavia and which is being continued here is perfectly swell.

Then there is Snideman, "the philosopher of Mount Alto," whom Dr. Lewis G. Beardsley, manager, considers one of the best and widest read men in the institution. This is his thought for Armistice Day:

"We ought to stop making heroes out of soldiers. We shouldn't let our children even see a rifle or a uniform. Let's apply ourselves to preserve the world peace by international co-operation."

Besides being Mount Alto's most avid reader, he is one of the gayest patients and has been there longer than all but a few others. If questioned on the subject, he says, with an open-hearth smile that is not forced, that his is a terminal case of rheumatic heart trouble and his next berth will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Proud of Their Service, But Hope Others Will Be Spared Perils.

Ever since coming to the hospital in January, 1933, he has been reading up on foreign affairs, philosophy, politics and anything else worth while he can get his hands on.

He served a year overseas with the 313th Infantry and from September 26 until 1918's fateful November 11 he was under fire almost continuously. Armistice Day found him lying in a muddy ditch at Woevre Plains, near Damvillers.

"Jerry was sending them back as fast as we gave it to them," he said. "Few of us believed it when we were told the war was over."

Was Railroad Man.

A resident of Upper Marlboro, Md., where his mother is in business, Snideman was a railroad man from the time of his return from France until failing health put him to bed a few years ago. He is allowed to walk about the floor a bit, but that's all.

He reads Anthony Eden's speeches, hopes soon to obtain a copy of Stefan Zweig's latest book, thinks the forthcoming Pan-American Conference in Buenos Aires is capable of much good and is disguised with the self-styled "100 per cent patriots" who are simply fishing for another war.

Mills, mentioned back there in the second paragraph, states his personal attitude toward future wars very succinctly.

"I'd never step across a ditch."

This is the way he puts it. Now, if this country were to be invaded by a foreign foe, that would be entirely different, he adds.

At 11 a. m. on the original Armistice Day, he recalled yesterday, he was aboard a tugboat which was going to put him on a transport for the homeward voyage from Brest. Two months and a day earlier he had been perforated with shrapnel from head to foot in the Argonne.

At the time of his discharge from the army—he was in the Fifth Division, Twenty-first Field Artillery, Battery C—Mills was a patient in Walter Reed Hospital. That was September 19, 1919.

In answering the interviewer's questions yesterday he risked more injury, though not service connected, because a barber was working on his whiskers with a long, sharp razor as he lay in bed. Mills is a Treasury Department employe, and he and his wife live at 2325 Third street northeast.

Though a trick knee is a constant reminder of his battle wounds, that isn't what put him in Mount Alto this time. He came up to have his appedix out.

"I thought I left it at Walter Reed in 1919," he said, "until about four months ago, when I began to have pains and found out I still had it. But it's gone now and I expect to be out in a week or so."

In Ward G were Edward T. Lumpkin, Walter Graham and Arthur L. Stras, chinning about old times and "may they never come back."

When the "cease firing" order was given 18 years ago today, Lumpkin was in line about 11 miles from Bar le Duc, preparing to go back into action with the 113th Field Hospital, Twenty-ninth Division. He had been in France four months.

When someone came up and said the Armistice had been signed neither Lumpkin nor his buddies knew what the guy was talking about. Meaning they didn't know the meaning of the word.

But they soon found out, and wow! did they celebrate in Bar le Duc!

"I hope and pray," said this genial Baltimorean, whose left arm can do little more than hold a cigarette between the fingers, "that this country will do everything possible to prevent future wars."

The best insurance against war, he believes, is an adequate armed defense. Some of his cronies at Mount Alto would disagree on that point.

He has had two operations on the arm, and the third, which he hopes will be successful, is not far distant.

Seated in a chair facing Lumpkin was Walter Graham, a seaman on the U. S. S. Cushing during the war. He readily concedes that the Army took more punishment than the Navy; but don't tell him life aboard a destroyer that made several transatlantic crossings in submarine-infested waters was a cinch.

Finally, but not least, was the Virginian, Arthur L. Stras, who lay patiently abed while Lumpkin and Graham did the talking. His silence, broken only a couple of times, was due to the fact that he had to hold a whistle-like contraption in his mouth.

"There you have an unusual sight," joked Graham. "Bet you never saw a man before with $7,500 worth of radium between his lips."

Stras was able to say he had been there since October 17, and later, with considerable emphasis, to blurt out, when asked if he'd go to war again:

"To hell with 'em"

Virginia ABC Revokes Permit In Alexandria

Beer Licenses of Two Other Restaurants in That City Suspended.

Richmond, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoked the beer license of Lomsky's Restaurant, Alexandria, today, and suspended indefinitely the permits of two other establishments in that city.

Charges of violating ABC regulations were dismissed against four other Alexandria restaurants at a hearing here, while the board turned down an application for a license filed by the beer garden. All of the establishments involved in the hearings are located in the 100 block Royal street, Alexandria.

The licenses of the Beer Hive and Dooley's place were suspended indefinitely. They were charged with selling beer to intoxicated persons. Lomsky's restaurant license was revoked because the board ruled the place was not equipped to serve food and yet held an on-premise license.

Cases against the Eatwell Cafe, Liberty Lunch, Lily Garden Restaurant and the Royal Cafe, all of which were charged with operating places in which disorderly conduct had occurred, were dismissed.

98 out of 100 Women say... "This Medicine Helps Me!"
By accurate record, 749,721 women out of 763,633 who report after taking the Vegetable Compound say that it helped them. If you are tired, run-down and nervous, give it a chance to help you, too. All druggists sell it.

Could Not Do Her Work
Mrs. Lillie Thompson of Bard, California is 47 years old. She was so nervous and rundown she could not do her housework. Had headaches and spent many days in bed. Much better since she took the Vegetable Compound.

Was Dizzy and Nervous

When Your Daughter Comes to Womanhood
Mrs. Maude Funkhauser of Worthington, Indiana was worried about her daughter Georgianna, age 17. She was pale and tired all the time. The Vegetable Compound gave her more pep. She is well and strong again now.

Feels Full of Pep Now
Velma Tracy of Greystone, Rhode Island is a domestic. She got weak and tired from so much hard work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave her new strength. Her nerves are 100% better and she has lots more pep.

Had Fainting Spells
Mildred Dickerman of Nebo, Illinois used to have such cramps that she often had to be carried home from school. The Vegetable Compound relieved her. She wishes she had known about it long before she did.

Tired, Worn Out, Had No Ambition
Mrs. Joseph Lefebvre of Summit Hill, Pennsylvania was all rundown and felt miserable. Since taking the Vegetable Compound she has gained in health and pep, has a good appetite and is enjoying life more than she has for years.

Good For Weak Women
Mrs. Betty Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio spent four months in bed after her baby was born. Was too weak to walk across the floor. Took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon up and doing her work.

For Hysterical Women
Mrs. Rose Zecka of West New York, New Jersey, was ill for months. Got down to 94 pounds and was ready to give up hope. Took the Vegetable Compound for three months. Appetite improved. Soon able to go back to work.

"All The Fun Was Gone Out of Life"
Says Mrs. Matushek of Chicago. She was nervous, had terrible headaches, was short-breathed and much swollen. The Vegetable Compound worked wonders in her case. She thinks it is a great medicine at Change of Life.

Get a Bottle NOW. It may be just what YOU NEED.

In a resolution, the association stated it condemns as being "contrary to the honest administration of justice the practice of some justices of the peace in extorting excessive fees from persons convicted before them."

The association also adopted a resolution commending Capt. Cockey's stand "to protect the citizens of this State and those of other States and the District of Columbia who may be passing through this county."

During the turbulent session, Capt. Cockey, whose single-handed fight has now resulted in the suspension of three members of the Hyattsville sub-station, took exception to a remark by Commissioner Joseph Blandford.

Clash Follows Remark.

In a heated debate on Capt. Cockey's motion to conduct a commissioners' investigation into alleged practices of the police department, Blandford, who opposed the action, asserted he did not want to "whitewash" the police.

Rising out of his chair and shaking his finger in Blandford's direction, Cockey shouted:

"Are you inferring that I want any 'whitewashing' done."

"If the police won't protect the public, we must protect the public against them."

He was driving along the Defense Highway about 10 miles from Hyattsville last August when another automobile swerved into his path causing him to come to an abrupt stop.

Says Car Struck His.

The car in back of him did not stop in time and crashed into the back of his automobile.

According to the testimony, Bell, driver of the rear car, and Bolton engaged in an argument, during which, it was alleged, the station attendant struck the youth on the nose and took him to the Hyattsville jail.

Here Bolton was confined when he was unable to post $1,100 bond on charges of reckless driving, exceeding 60 miles an hour and driving while drunk.

The next morning, it was stated, Bell went to see Bolton in the lock-up and told him everything would be all right if he posted $11.70.

The money was paid and the youth was released. He heard nothing more of the case, he said.

It was said by the commissioners that Bell has no authority to make arrests unless deputized in cases of emergency.

As in last week's suspension of two officers—Warren E. Peake and Claude A. Reese—the board at first declined to take action in the matter, later reversing its decision.

Prior to the suspension order, the board was presented with a request for an investigation from the mayor and town council of Hyattsville.

Appealing to the board either to exonerate the entire police department or else to punish the guilty offenders, H. Winship Wheatley, jr., town counsel, said the current investigation had placed Hyattsville in a bad light.

He also criticized the condition of the jail and asked that the board find a more suitable location for it.

Appointment Approved.

After consulting with Chief Jeremiah J. Crowley, the commissioners approved the temporary appointment of Karl Krauss, of Riverdale, as desk clerk and jailer.

State Attorney Alan Bowie, charged with assembling evidence for presentation to the grand jury at its special session, probably the first Monday in December, promised the commissioners to have photostatic copies of the police records made for them before their meeting next Tuesday.

A request for photostatic copies of the records was made by the commissioner at their last meeting, as a precaution against the books being tampered with.

Appointment of a special investigator to assist Bowie in his scrutiny of evidence assembled by the Keystone Automobile Club is expected before the end of the week it was learned.

Jewish Emigration Pressed by Poland

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, asserted today there was "no longer any reason for the existence of small Jewish shopkeepers" in Poland, and disclosed he had discussed with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden their emigration to Palestine.

Contending the Jewish situation was the "unfortunate" result of "perfecting the Polish nation," Beck indicated his country was opposed to further reduction of Holy Land immigration schedules.

Adm. Leahy Succeeds Standley As Ranking Officer in Navy

yesterday that Rear Admiral Edward C. Kalbfus, now president of Naval War College, at Newport, R. I., will become a vice admiral, commanding battleships of the United States Fleet and relieving Vice Admiral Clarence S. Kempff, who will be ordered as commandant of the Mare Island (Calif.) Navy Yard.

Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, now a member of the General Board of the department here, will relieve Admiral Bloch in command of Battleship Division No. 2.

A number of shifts in shore assignments, as well as the foregoing changes, were announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

Other Assignments.

Rear Admiral Arthur St. Clair Smith, who is now commandant at Mare Island, will go in as commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, at San Francisco.

Rear Admiral Charles P. Snyder, now commanding Crusier Division No. 5 of the United States Fleet, will relieve Admiral Kalbfus as president of the Naval War College.

Responding to many queries, the department asserted that Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, now superintendent of the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, will continue in his position until he retires in February, 1938.

Marine Corps circles last night considered the appointment of Brig. Gen. Holcomb as an upset. Other officers have been mentioned prominently for this post.

Born August 8, 1879, in Delaware, Gen. Holcomb was awarded the Navy Cross and the Purple Heart for service during the World War. He is considered comparatively young to head the corps.

All the changes in fleet command will take place next month, the department stated.

Admiral Leahy will come to Washington to take over his new job before the retirement of Admiral Standley.

The Navy Department also announced that Secretary Swanson had ordered a selection board to convene November 30 to recommend captains and commanders of the line for promotion to the grades of rear admirals and captain, respectively.

City Schools Stay Shut After Parley

Springfield, Ohio, Nov. 10 (AP).—With a large audience present, the Springfield board of education met for five minutes tonight and adjourned without action in the crisis which forced the 26 public schools to close indefinitely Friday.

Simultaneously, after a three-hour closed meeting of the Springfield Real Estate Board, which fought the defeated 3-mil 1 school levy in the election, President Paul T. Gerhardt announced:

"We will offer a proposition which we believe will solve the school situation in Springfield and other cities."

Chest Forces Public 'G-Men,' Clegg Declares

Assistant Director Exhorts Unit to Push Drive for Relief Fund.

Likening the Community Chest battle against "Four Public Enemies" to the crusade of the "G" Men, Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, last night urged 900 members of the metroplitan unit to go forth as "C" men and women and help rid Washington of these "public enemies."

In one of the most striking talks ever delivered on behalf of the Community Chest in Washington, Clegg likened public enemy hunger to the "heartless Hamilton who hovers over the homes of humble and haughty humanity. This public enemy," he said, "represents hunger for food and friendship, hunger for counsel and confidence, hunger for self-respect and security, hunger for home and hospitality."

The speaker likened disease to "the dread death-dealing Dillinger, lurking like a rogue in unsuspected hideouts, striking in tenements where hovels are the only hospitals, then moving stealthily into respectable circles, striking down the innocent, making no distinction of class, race, color, size or age."

He drew a word picture of Harry Campbell to describe the public enemy crime, as "the cruel criminal Campbell, challenging the very fiber of our civilization. The G-men, the policeman, and the special agent," Clegg said, "are making gains against the active criminal. The C-man can best serve by preventing enlistments in the ranks of the enemy, thereby preventing crime and eliminating the causes of crime."

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, urged the workers to present their cause in the most forceful fashion and work for the greatest possible gift."

Coleman Jennings, campaign manager, called upon the workers to join in a "glorious adventure" in putting the campaign across.

Earlier in the day the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, speaking at the report meeting of the Special Assignment Unit, declared that the Chest "unifies the life of the community as nothing else can do."

"All evidence points to a change in the tide," the BIshop continued, "people are beginning to revert to the vernacular to 'loosen up.' They are beginning to recognize their obligations. They are reaching not only into their income, but into their capital to help others.

Conditions Serious.

"We are facing a serious and critical condition in this country even though signs point to business coming back. We have only to look at the situation in Europe, at Russia, a shadow on the whole world, at France and Spain and even into the Empire of Great Britain, to recognize what can happen.

"I say to you that we are almost buying insurance in giving to this cause. You should not accept alibis. You should insist on every contributor doing his utmost."

Dr. Willlam McClellan, last year's campaign chairman, was introduced by Chairman Tumulty and expressed regroet at not being active in the Chest this year. He praised its work and the organization which is carrying on.

Among the gifts reported yesterday were the following:

Potomac Electric Power Co., $15,000; Riggs National Bank, $7,500; Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, $2,500; Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich, sr., $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. Abram Lisner, $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Happy Endings

Elderly Woman, Unexpectedly Stricken Ill, Is Aided by Visiting Nurse Society.

There are authentic cases taken from files of Community Chest agencies and show how Chest funds have helped some person over a hard spot. Any names, of course, are fictitious.

She had lived alone all her life. The years were creeping on and it wouldn't be long until she reached the "three score and ten."

She had never had to worry. A small annuity, $50 a month, provided for her simple wants. Always active, she had been able to take care of herself.

One morning conditions were changed. She found herself unable to leave her bed. Frightened, she called a doctor, and the kindly physician told her that her activities for the future would be confined to a wheel chair. She could still get about her little home. A kindly neighbor helped with the dinner and helped her to bed. But she needed treatment. She needed attention and massage at least once a day. There was no one to whom she could turn.

The happy ending?

The physician reported her case to the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society. The next morning a bright-faced nurse arrived to give her the necessary attention.

The nurse pays her a daily visit. The old lady says that the nurse's smile is her one bright spot of the day and she's hoping to get well to again look after herself.

U. S. Reported Due to Borrow $300,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Possibility the Treasury may go into the money market next month for $300,000,000 of new cash and that the December financing may aggregate about $1,500,000,000, was discussed yesterday in well-informed fiscal quarters.

Nothing will be said about the borrowing officially until Secretary Morgenthau makes a formal announcement, but Treasury sources hinted the Government may seek to bolster its supply of ready cash.

President Roosevelt has estimated that net new borrowing for this fiscal year will total $75,000,000.

About $450,000,000 was borrowed in September, thus a call for an additional $300,000,000 in December would complete demands for new money under that program.

In mid-December, $358,000,000 of 2¾ per cent notes and $450,000,000 of discount bills will mature. The Treasury also may make provision for $429,000,000 of 3 per cent notes due February 15, which, with $300,000,000 of new borrowing, would bring the financing to $1,537,000,000.

One factor increasing the possibility of new borrowing was seen in Secretary Morgenthau's recent statement that at least $1,000,000,000 would be kept in the Treasury's working balance as "insurance" against "times and conditions" abroad.

The balance has dropped off $222,000,000 since September to $1,164,000,000, and, if it is to be retained above the billion-dollar level, new money may be necessary.

In addition, some sources said, the highly favorable market position of Government securities should enable "cheap" borrowing in December, making a call for new cash propitious at that time.

College Income Rises 12.6%, U. S. Reveals

The office of education said yesterday a survey of college and university finances showed a general increase in 1935-36 fiscal year receipts, compared with the preceding year.

Reporting an average advance of 12.6 per cent in receipts of institutions studied, the office said expenditures for instructional and general purposes at the same time increased 5.8 per cent.

Election Raises Backers Hopes Of World Court

By the Associated Press.

The effect of election year changes on the Senate's World Court line-up gave rise yesterday to speculation that President Roosevelt might be encouraged to revive the issue in the next Congress.

Of first significance, it was noted that while ratification of American adherence missed by seven votes in January, 1935, ten Senators who voted against it have been displaced by defeat at the polls, death or retirement.

How their successors would vote, should the question be raised again, remained to be revealed. Some quarters held it of possible significance, however, that all but two of them were Democrats who came into office with the Roosevelt sweep of last week.

Avoided in Platform.

The Democratic platform of this year made no mention of the court. But President Roosevelt has been a vigorous proponent of adherence and there was nothing to indicate a change in his attitude since he urged ratification at the outset of the last Congress. Also the Republican platform declared against the court.

At all events, some administration aids, interested in foreign affairs, were keenly aware of the year's changes in the personal of the Senate and have been doing some close figuring on how the new Senate might vote.

Last year's vote was 52 to 36, or seven less affirmative votes than the two-thirds stipulated by the Constitution for ratification. The result was in doubt to the last minute, with Administration forces confident of victory.

In some quarters an address by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, which loosed a flood of telegrams upon uncertain Senators, was credited with having been a major influence in swinging some votes to the negative.

Withdrawal a Factor.

Those who were gauging the prospects of another ballot on the question, took into their calculations that the Michigan priest has announced the termination of all his radio and political activities, as the result of last week's election.

Of the 36 who voted against ratification last January, Carey, of Wyoming; Dickinson, of Iowa; Hastings, of Delaware; Metcalf, of Rhode Island (all Republicans) and Gore of Oklahoma, Democrat, have been defeated in primary or general elections. Death took Senators Long, of Louisiana; Murphy, of Iowa; Trammell, of Florida (all Democrats) and Schall, of Minnesota, a Republican. Coolidge, of Massachusetts, a Democrat, did not seek re-election.

Democrats were elected to all of these places with the exception that Senator-Elect Lodge, a Republican, succeeded Coolidge and Senator-elect Lundeen (Farmer-Labor) followed Schall.

Idahoan, Housekeeper Held in Child's Death

Pocatello, Idaho, Nov. 10 (AP).—L. W. Evans, 44, and his housekeeper, Lela Broadhead, 36, denied today they had mistreated the former's 4-year-old daughter, found dead Saturday.

The couple, accused by a coroner's jury at nearby American Falls of criminal negligence in the child's death, was brought here "for safekeeping."

"I am innocent and did not want to cause any trouble—that's why I let them bring me here," Evans said.

Mrs. Broadhead, tears in her eyes, said she had been a companion to the child. "Georgia loved me," she said. "I am a mother of six children myself, and stories about me mistreating Georgia are not true."

Authorities said the child's body was covered with scars and bruises. At an inquest physicians testified infection caused death.

Army Expands Plans For Bombing Practice

March Field, Calif., Nov. 10 (AP).—Army aviators' plans to practice battlefield bombing by using a dummy target in the great Salt Lake were expanded today.

Lieut. Col. Hubert R. Harmon, commanding officer of the nineteenth bombardment group, announced that 15 instead of nine bombers would participate in the flight to Salt Lake City Saturday.

Each will carry two 200-pound high explosive demolition bombs, with two different salvos of 4,500 pounds each projected for the 10 by 15 foot canvas and wood target set up in the southeastern corner of the lake. March Field officers consider this one of the most sensational maneuvers the air base has attempted.

Machado Sails Today.

Montreal, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—Gerardo Machado, fugitive former President of Cuba, said today he would sail tomorrow for a winter vacation in Bermuda. Machado, who was deposed by the 1933 revolution in Cuba, came to Montreal early last summer after having sought refuge in many countries. He said he intended to return here in the spring.

Reich Prepared To Join France In New Locarno

Aid of England to Be Asked in German Efforts to Insure Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—Understanding with France is the next objective of German diplomacy, one of the highest officials of the Wilhelmstrasse said today.

"After the extremely satisfactory visit of Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, to Berlin," he said, "Our relationship to France is the next great problem to be straightened out.

"The aid of England, too, will be invoked in our efforts toward obtaining a Franco-German rapprochement," the Wilhelmstrasse spokesman stated.

Difficulties Stressed.

"The British government has received the replies of France, Italy, Belgium and our country to the proposal for a new Locarno. It is now up to the British to add their own observations to these four replies and then to try to find some synthesis between the various points of view. That will not be easy.

"We are ready now, as before, to enter into some sort of arrangement similar to that of the Locarno Treaty of 1925.

"I am frank to say," he continued, "that from our viewpoint we don't attach as much importance to such an arrangement now as we did in 1925. Since then, the military position has changed radically. We don't particularly need the guaranties of Great Britain and Italy for our security.

French Stand Cited.

"The trouble lies not with us, nor with Italy and Great Britain. As far as our three nations and Belgium are concerned, Locarno could be revived in its original conception today.

"It is France that is creating difficulties by her intricate system of alliances. She insists upon dragging our eastern neighbors, Czechoslovakia and Poland, into the discussion, and now even upon including Soviet Russia among the powers to whose aid she must come in the event of a clash.

"The French," he went on, "speak about the 'indivisibility of peace.' But why insist that the same identical method of safeguarding it be applied in the east of Europe as in the west? Conditions to the east of us are quite different from those to the west."

If all attempts to agree on a new Locarno fail, the spokesman said, an attempt will be made at a direct understanding between Germany and her hereditary enemy, France.

"In their conversations, Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France have shown themselves to be very reasonable and conciliatory," he added. "It is only when they write us notes that we see how far we are still separated from our neighbor.

"We offer France a nonaggression pact. Why, I ask you, does she not accept?"

McKellar to Ask Digest Poll Inquiry

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 10 (AP).—United States Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, advocating a Senate investigation into the Literary Digest's 1936 Presidential poll, said today he would sponsor legislation to place future straw votes under strict Federal supervision.

In a statement, the veteran Tennessee Democrat described the Digest poll, which forecast victory for Gov. Alf M. Landon, as "a great wrong to American voters" and added:

"Any newspaper or magazine conducting such a poll, before being allowed to publish partial or final results, should have a Federal supervisory body composed of active and intelligent partisans of the parties participating in the election.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Literary Digest, invited Senator McKellar today to examine all its records at its offices here and count the ballots himself.

"If Senator McKellar desires, as he has suggested, fuller, more accurate and truer information than has already been broadcast widely, he will be welcome at the offices of the Literary Digest to obtain such by his personal inspection at any time, even before the opening of Congress."

'Protect Gains,' Farley Warns On Eve of Trip

'Reactionaries' Are Powerful, He Says, Preparing to Leave for Europe.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley tonight urged all who worked for re-election of President Roosevelt to keep alive their "militant spirit" to protect their "gains" against attacks by the "reactionary group."

Speaking at a dinner given him by his aides at Democratic headquarters on the eve of his departure for a vacation in Europe, Farley said "the reactionary group is, perhaps, temporarily stunned by the events of last Tuesday, but its spokesmen will soon come out of it and resume their normal activities, and we must not underestimate their power and influence.

"There will always remain a substantial minority who will seek to retain the advantages they had," he asserted.

"We cannot accept it as a fact that the fight for human rights and a fair deal all around ended with the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt, John Garner and those whopping majorities in the Senate and House of Representatives.

Seeks to Consolidate Gains.

"That is why I say we—and I mean the whole people who voted the indorsement of the Roosevelt Administration — are confronted with the gravest responsibility. We must keep alive the militant spirit which won so much, to preserve and consolidate our gains.

"I am not speaking politically, for millions of those who worked with us to retain Franklin D. Roosevelt as President were not Democrats in the narrow sense of party partisanship. I am thinking particularly of the great volume of independents who voted regardless of the party emblem, for the men they deem the best fitted for office and the policies they deem most beneficial for the country."

Farley said he is "willing to credit the vast majority of our recent enemies with sincerity as great as our own" and that "they were entitled to their theory of Government—a very old theory that what aided them the most was the best policy."

Communism Not a Threat.

He added, however, that "as the years go by and business continues good, they will come to understand that Communism is not a threat in the United States; that they are not menaced with a dictatorship—that there is no danger of confiscation, taxation or otherwise."

"It will dawn upon them," he said, "that in the White House sits a man as deeply—perhaps much more deeply—concerned with the success of industry and commerce than they are themselves. He knows that a successful Administration means a prosperous country, and he knows that a prosperous country implies that prosperity must be general.

"It is a fine thing to be a multi-millionaire, but if the making of one swollen fortune means the pauperization of a million people, the gain in national happiness is hardly commensurate with one individual's contentment."

Regarding collective security, he said:

"We know that other nations cannot achieve peace without us. It is not a question of the isolation of the U. S. S. R. but rather the isolation of the other countries of Europe, rendering them defenseless and subjugating them to aggressors. We can quietly wait until Europe takes its choice."

Private Houses Raided.

Berlin, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung reported from Moscow tonight that an "arrest fever" there had resulted in a long series of raids on private houses in which five Germans were taken into custody.

The newspaper reported other persons arrested, including Austrians, Swedes and Poles. Further arrests, it was said, are being made in cities in other sections of Russia.

Soviet watchmen outside foreign embassies, it was reported, have been increased recently by "whole columns of civil agents" who question everyone entering them while "important members of the diplomatic corps have now 'an honor guard' which follows them day and night."

Arthur Reeves, HOLC Auditor, Is Found Dead

Heart Attack Is Given as Cause; Body to Be Sent to Winchester, Ky.

Arthur J. Reeves, 39, auditor for the HOLC, was found dead yesterday in the bathroom of the home of his brother-in-law, Clarence H. Scrivner, 711 Houston street, Silver Spring, Md.

Reeves, who lived at 8209 Cedar road, Silver Spring, had just returned from a visit to the home of his wife's father, H. B. Scrivner, municipal judge of Winchester, Ky. He was pronounced dead by Drs. Norman Shoemaker and William Shannon, who gave the cause as a heart attack. Scrivner discovered the body.

Reeves was born in Parkersburg, W. Va. He was graduated from Marietta College, Ohio. Before coming to Washington 18 months ago he was employed in Saginaw, Mich., as office manager of the Eastern Gulf Refining Co.

Terminating his work for the HOLC last week, Reeves left with his wife and two children for Winchester and returned yesterday to inquire whether he had been selected for a position in the Detroit regional office of the HOLC.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mamie S. Reeves, two sons, Arthur J. Reeves, jr., 17, and William Bradley Reeves, 12, and his mother, Mrs. Maud G. Stilles, Springfield, Ohio.

Dr. G. R. Cole Dies; Practiced 49 Years

Dr. G. R. Lee Cole, 72, for 49 years a Washington physician, died at his home, 418 Seventh street southwest, yesterday after a brief illness.

A graduate of the University of Maryland's college of medicine in the class of 1887, Dr. Cole also attended old St. John's Academy, in Alexandria; George Washington University and the National College of Pharmacy.

He took post-graduate work at St. Thomas Clinic, in London, England, and for a while was professor of mental diseases at National University.

Dr. Cole served as an assistant surgeon with the Army, and had the rank of lieutenant for a number of years. He also was attached to the staffs of Emergency and Providence hospitals, and for six years was surgeon of the District National Guard.

He was a past president of the Pathological Clinic of Washington, a member of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons and a thirty-second degree Mason.

Surviving Dr. Cole are a daughter, Mrs. C. M. Marsteller, of Bridgeport, Conn., and a son, G. R. Lee Cole, jr., of Falls Church, Va. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents the Westminster Chorus (John Finley Williamson, director) in Armstrong High School Tuesday night with Dorothy Mainor, soprano soloist. Program: Motet, "Sing Ye to the Lord" (Bach), "Choral Symphony" (Roy Harris), "Wake Up, Sweet Melody" (Cain), "Water Boy" (Robinson), "Whoopee-ti-yo-yo" (O'Hara), "The Shower" (Angelli), "The Sleigh" (Kountz-Mueller), "Echo Song" (Di Lasso), "Slumber Song" (Fischer), "Pawnee Indian Victory Song" (Curtis). Soprano soli: "Vaughissma Sembianza" (Donaudy), "Ah, Love, But a Day (Beach), "Sit Down, Servant" (Dett), "Pace, mio Dio" (Verdi).

John Finley Williamson's finely trained ensemble of mixed voices is by now so soundly established that its merits are almost taken as a matter of course. When unspectacular and sincerely artistic singing is concerned, this situation has its disadvantages for both the organization and the public. The latter is inclined toward a mildly interested attitude which resulted in last evening's relatively small attendance, and the former may unconsciously relax its highest tension and occasionally fall below its own standards.

One felt in the singing of the Bach motet, where only the andante section was wholly satisfactory, that too much attention was being paid to the technical execution and not enough to the devotional feeling of the music. Those indefinable emotional nuances which pervade every measure of the composition were missing for the most part in a dynamic monotony. One was conscious of listening to the movement of the music, to the weaving of the vocal parts in their patterns, and not to the spiritual content.

The "Choral Symphony" of Roy Harris, heard here for the first time, is a work which requires more than one performance for an assimilation of its meaning and an understanding of its structure. The writing has an intricacy that attracts one's attention to the vocal problems involved, while appreciation of its ideational significance lags a little behind. This is particularly the case in the triple fugue which constitutes the third movement, where the words were completely obliterated in the interplay of themes.

At a first hearing, the most impressive portion of the work is the second movement, "Tears," where the threnody of women's voices wavers like a misty curtain before the solidity of the reiterated spoken lament of the men. This is remarkably original choral writing, with an unusual contrast of timbres, and its moving effectiveness is indisputable. The undulatory internal rhythm in the opening "Song of All Seas, All Ships" is another of Mr. Harris' happy inventions. He is to be congratulated upon a composition important for both its atmospheric efficacy and its skill.

Of the remainder of the concerted pieces, the most interesting were Angelli's "The Shower," imported from the Soviet Republics, and the Pawnee Indian song of victory arranged from Natalie Curtis' recording.

Counsel Denies Garfinckel Sale Is Considered

Hogan Quiets Rumors Bids Made; School Bequest Explained.

No possibility of sale of the Julius Garfinckel store is in sight, according to a statement yesterday by Frank Hogan, the merchant's personal lawyer and one of the executors of the will.

He said he had heard rumors that various purchasers were in the market for the establishment, but that to date no offers have been forthcoming, and so far as he knew there exists no likelihood of sale even if some had.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the chief beneficiary of the program of 109 annuities set up in the will is dead. He was James Herbert Johnson, former store manager, bequeathed $6,000 a year out of the store profits. He has been dead three months and his legacy, good only during life, has reverted to the general estate.

Hogan explained that eventually all of the funds set aside for annuities will revert to the estate and that in time all profits from the store and real estate owned by Mr. Garfinckel will be used to finance the Hannah Harrison School of Industrial Arts.

Idea Cherished Long.

This school, yet to be established, embodies a dream that Mr. Garfinckel, who died last Thursday of pneumonia, had cherished through many years of his life. A man who had known hardships and limited opportunity himself, and a son who revered his mother deeply, he founded the school in her name, in his will.

It is to be supervised by the Y. W. C. A. As the passing years remove the beneficiaries of various annuities from among the living, as already has happened to Mr. Johnson, the capital which financed them will be devoted to the maintenance of the school. Hogan estimated that some day the income from more than $5,000,000 will go to the school.

Most of Mr. Garfinckel's property consists of real estate and the store, and the store business. "The store has been exceptionally prosperous," said Hogan yesterday. "From it will derive funds to maintain a fine school where deserving young women can study and live at the same time, in comfortable and healthful surroundings."

Mr. Garfinckel, he said, wrote the passage in the will which establishes the institution. It contained a touching tribute to his mother.

1,600 at Services Of Jewish Veterans

A plea for an adequate Navy to guarantee peace was made last night by Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves at Armistice Day services of Washington Post, No. 58, of Jewish War Veterans.

The services drew a crowd of 1,600, which jammed the Jewish Community Center.

Lean, white-bearded Admiral Reeves drew applause from the crowd as he walked to the platform past an American Legion guard of honor.

Reeves praised the part American Jews have played in both peace and war. Then he told them the Navy "stands between us and any possible foreign menace."

After a concert by the United States Navy Band Orchestra, Albert W. Jacobson, commander of Post No. 58 of the Jewish War Veterans told th eaudience he had learned two lessons from the war. The first was to be prepared to fight; the second was that an American respected neither race nor creed and died for his ideals.

Mrs. Hilda Barr, president of the local auxiliary post, and Mrs. Dorothy Kuran, national president spoke briefly. Cantor Louis Novick pronounced the prayer for the dead. Rabbi Solomon Metz chanted Kaddish, the prayer Jews offer on the anniversary of the death of a relative.

Mrs. C. G. Mock Funeral Rites Set for Today

Services for Celebrated Spiritualist Will Be Held in Indiana.

Funeral services will be held today at Bluffton, Ind., for Mrs. Charlotte G. Mock, 63, internationally known spiritualist, and a District resident since 1920, who died Sunday at her home, 2960 Newark street northwest.

Mrs. Mock was born at Liverpool, England, but was brought to Indianapolis when a baby. At an early age she became interested in spiritualism. She was fostered in this work for many years by James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, and Mrs. Thomas Hendricks, wife of the one-time Governor of Indiana.

In 1905 she visited Paris at the invitation of French spiritualists. She remained there until 1913, when she went to London. While there she published a book on spiritualism entitled "Dr. Coulter's Letters," which ran through 39 editions. It later was republished in this country.

Shortly before the World War, she returned to America and married John Mock, a Department of Justice attorney, then Mayor of Bluffton, Ind. When war was declared she returned to England to aid in building a 200-bed hospital constructed next to the United States Embassy in London.

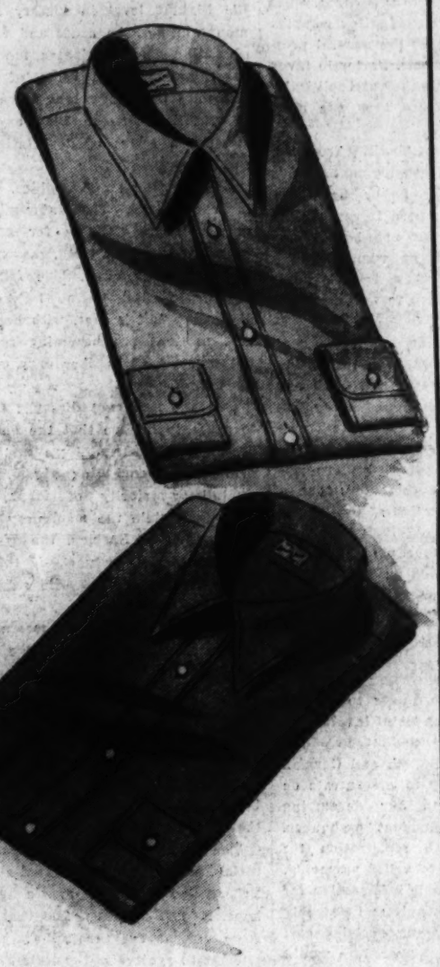
Well known here, Mrs. Mock was formerly executive secretary of the American Pen Women's Association, a member of the Women's Civic Club and a former vice president of the Indiana State Society.

According to relatives, she was sent by King Edward, then Prince of Wales, to Greece to negotiate in having that country join the allies. Prior to the war, she visited Sir Oliver Lodge in the interest of spiritualism.

Mrs. Mock's home in Indiana, which is built on the banks of the Wabash, is modeled after Shakespeare's Stratford-on-Avon. Surviving are her husband and a son.

4 Die in India Riots.

Bombay, India, Nov. 10 (A.P.).—Four persons were killed and 40 injured here today in a renewal of communal rioting. Mobs fought a pitched battle in the Kamatipura area. Today's casualties brought the total for the disorders, which have broken out sporadically, to 71 killed and 630 injured.



Manhattan

EVEN-TONE SHIRTS

$2

—There is a classic simplicity about Eventones, the current Manhattan shirt we're featuring. Just a smooth, rich, plain weave (end-and-end broadcloth), but it is the very essence of smartness. The colors are somewhere between deep and pastel, rather different than the usual variety. You ought to see these shirts as Manhattan has tailored them. They're really superb. Three colors for your selection . . . blue, tan and grey.

ALPACUNA

—the wonder of overcoats for warmth and wear!

You won't find them anywhere else in Washington

—If you want warmth, if you want a hard-wearing coat . . . you want Alpacuna! Its fabric is made from the luxurious hair of the South American Alpaca goat. This hair is remarkable because it provides an unusual degree of real warmth and yet is extremely light in weight. Science proves that Alpacuna is 26.3% warmer . . . 61% longer wearing and 1½ pounds lighter! These facts account for its making as warm a coat as we have ever seen, yet being so light you hardly know you have it on. An excellent investment at $40! Won't you make it a point to see for yourself the virtues of Alpacuna?

Unlawful Snooping.

The wholesale seizure of private telegrams by the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee has been generally recognized as one of the blackest chapters in the history of legislative fishing expeditions. That view has now been sustained by the United States Courts of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in spite of the fact that the court has no authority to prevent the Senate from using information obtained by these underhand methods.

In some respects the court's criticism of the Federal Communications Commission was perhaps too sweeping. Justice Groner assumed that agents of the F. C. C. "took possession of the telegraph companies' offices and examined wholesale the thousands of private telegraph messages received and dispatch therefrom over a period of seven months for the purpose of securing to the Senate committee knowledge of the contents of the messages." This action the opinion condemns as being "contrary to the very terms of the act under which the commission was constituted."

Of course the commission does have authority to examine telegrams when that appears necessary for enforcement of the law governing such communications. Senator Black's committee had produced considerable evidence to show that records required by law were being destroyed. In theory, at least, the F. C. C. investigation was properly aimed at this abuse. It was the distortion of this legitimate inquiry into a "dragnet seizure of private telegraphic messages" and the disclosure of their contents to the Black committee for which agents of the F. C. C. should be sharply reprimanded.

Primarily, however, this violation of constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure is the responsibility of the Black committee. F. C. C. agents probably would not have flouted the law if they had not been placed under pressure from the Senate investigators. Moreover, the controversy would not have attained its present proportions if the committee had used the information thus illegally obtained merely for its own information. Instead, it permitted publication of at least one telegram for the sole purpose of embarrassing the sender. These are the tactics of fascism. They are utterly at variance with the American principle of freedom from promiscuous governmental snooping.

Justice Groner clearly indicated that if the case had been presented before the damage had been done, the telegraph company would have been restrained from releasing any messages not pertinent to the Senate's inquiry. Since the information is already in the hands of the committee, the court wisely refrained from any interference with its use. That lies within the legislative discretion over which the courts have no power.

Even so, this opinion has left the Black committee only one honorable course. "Congress," it is noted, "'is as much the guardian of the liberties and welfare of the people as the courts.'" Hence, the court assumes that "the Senate will not use its proceeds in disregard of appellant's rights" when attention has been called to the "unlawful nature" of its search.

Under this adroit conclusion the Black committee will find it difficult to resume its flagrant abuse of private rights without acknowledging contempt for constitutional guarantees.

The Abattoir Problem.

The possibility that a slaughterhouse may be opened in an inappropriate section of the city results from a flaw in the zoning regulations.

An area that was, in 1920, considered suitable for certain industries today has entirely changed. Thus an abandoned packing house on the east banks of the Anacostia River, first opened in the '80s, now finds itself flanked by a parkway and a row of landscaped Civil War forts. Added proof of the improved nature of the neighborhood is found in the construction of an extensive housing project directly across the narrow river from the old abattoir, while a new athletic stadium is rising just beyond.

Yet because the area is still zoned as "industrial" and because there is nothing in the law to regulate the construction of rendering plants, a meat company is planning to reopen the slaughterhouse on a larger scale than before. Citizens who consider this obnoxious and injurious are naturally up in arms. But a further peculiarity of the District law prevents the zoning commission from controlling the packers' plans. Even though the rating of an area can be changed, full advertisement of intention must be given in advance. And no change in the law would have a retroactive effect.

Nevertheless, the courts can declare a business a nuisance and order its removal. That a slaughterhouse in the midst of a park and dwelling neighborhood would constitute a nuisance is a reasonable contention and one which seems likely to be advanced if a generally acceptable solution of the dispute is not voluntarily forthcoming.

Counting Unemployed Noses.

The Department of Commerce announces plans for the appropriation of from fifteen to twenty million dollars to be devoted to taking a census of unemployment. The announcement is made public on the same day that the British ministry of labor, as a normal routine matter, reports the number of registered unemployed in that country as showing a further decrease to a present total of 1,611,810.

If the Administration, having fumbled the unemployment problem for four years, would concentrate on elementary principles in this field the United States also could know the extent, the nature and the incidence of its unemployment. We would not need $20,000,000 censuses which will in large part be out of date before they are even completed.

The system followed in Great Britain is to have every able-bodied relief applicant registered at his local public employment exchange. Without that registration, and without continuous availability for such appropriate private employment at standard rates as may be offered through that agency, he is ineligible for relief, whether it be unemployment insurance, dole, or of the made-work variety.

Development of a similar economical and rational system adapted to this country has been delayed by the boondoggling complex of Harry Hopkins and by the general pressure which exudes from Mr. Farley in favor of extending doles where they are politically useful rather than where they are most needed.

Slowly, and in spite of hostility from the politicians, the Federal Employment Service of the Department of Labor has been brought to the stage where it can and is registering most of the able-bodied unemployed. But until the whole swollen WPA outfit is deflated there is little prospect here of any approach to the deficiency of the British system.

Instead of concentrating on the essential tie-up between relief and registration the Administration is now apparently willing to let still a third distinct agency—the Department of Commerce—dig into the Treasury for a nose count of the unemployed. The magnitude of the suggested appropriation indicates that something more than a virtually useless enumeration of the jobless may be contemplated. Undoubtedly such a census would have some value if it obtained reliable information on the numbers at work, by occupational classifications, age groups and regional distribution, in addition to a mere counting of the jobless. For the latter purpose, however, such a census would be largely wasted money.

If the Administration wants to have a continuously accurate census of involuntary unemployment, similar to that possessed for years by both the British and German governments, it has only to concentrate on further improvement in our developing system of public employment exchanges. This step, coupled with registration for work as a prerequisite to relief payments, would provide the desirable information far more easily, far more cheaply and probably far more accurately, than any special census.

Of course such rational procedure would be painful for Mr. Farley, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Tugwell and all the others who find it more profitable to waste public money than to know how many are unemployed. Of course, it would involve an economical, and therefore seemingly undesirable, liquidation of overlapping unemployment relief activities. But after messing with this problem for nearly four years without getting anywhere it is at least possible that the President will soon begin to see the desirability of applying some common sense in the approach.

Mr. Hamilton's Realism.

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, is taking a commendable attitude in defeat. First, he candidly acknowledges the deluge of Democratic votes as representing popular indorsement of the New Deal. Then, without wasting time on excuses for the Republican Party, he is preparing a campaign to "revitalize" the G. O. P. Finally, he insists that this must be done without resort to "backbiting" and with no attempt to "hamstring" Mr. Roosevelt's legislative program.

The G. O. P. is not accustomed to the role of the minority. During most of the period since its disaster of 1932 it has sat by expecting the turn of events to sweep it into power again almost automatically. With the lesson of 1936 following that of 1934 the need for reinforcement of the party organization from the ground up is glaringly apparent. Mr. Hamilton is facing this task realistically. He evidently understands that four years of campaigning by an Administration cannot be overcome by four months of concentrated opposition activity.

Certainly Mr. Hamilton is correct in assuming that the G. O. P. must prove itself an effective opposition party before it can hope to be entrusted again with control of the Government. At present it is severely handicapped in this role because of its extreme weakness in Congress. But that merely emphasizes the responsibility upon the Republican organization. During the next two years the minority will be weak regardless of any stimulants that may be applied by Mr. Hamilton or the national committee. If rehabilitation should again be delayed until just before the Congressional elections of 1938, that impotence will tend to become chronic.

It is no minimization of the President's strong popular appeal to point out that the Democratic Party's success at the polls is due in no small measure to the persistent, thorough and highly competent political activity of James A. Farley and his aids. Without adopting those aspects of Farleyism which tend to undermine the public service, the G. O. P. faces the necessity of intensifying its organization work with a skill similar to that employed by the Democratic chairman. As that is being done, moreover, Mr. Hamilton ought to analyze the last campaign to determine which Republican blunders contributed materially to the Roosevelt landslide.

Eighteen Years After.

While Armistice Day continues to be a day of grateful remembrance and solemn dedication among the powers victorious in the World War, the anniversaries of the signing of the Versailles and other peace treaties of 1919 are passed over in silence.

There is good reason for this discrimination. We can still rejoice in the cessation of fighting 18 years ago today. But there is no reason to rejoice in the peace settlements that were actually made. They were, and continue to be, seed-beds of trouble and turmoil.

The world outlook today is in many particulars extremely disturbing. Peace rests on shaky foundations and is forever at the mercy of an incident. Armaments are at the highest level in history and steadily mount higher. An acute and virulent form of nationalism dominates more than one great nation. That reign of law, which countless thousands laid down their lives to establish between 1914 and 1918, has suffered a series of devastating blows in recent years.

Rival political philosophies, which agree in emphasizing the submission of the governed, are fighting for mastery. The struggle between them, as the Spanish tragedy makes clear, bids fair to engulf the world. And by no means the least disturbing fact is that, with hopeless fatalism, millions are becoming reconciled to the prospect of another orgy of wholesale bloodshed.

But one need not discount the dangers to peace to believe that the outlook is by no means hopeless. Here and there are rifts in the encircling gloom. The overwhelming majority of mankind detests war. And while the machinery of peace—the League of Nations, the World Court, the Briand-Kellogg pact—is today largely disused, there are few who suggest that it be scrapped.

It may be argued that these are negative factors. But there are positive indications as well that the cause of peace is by no means lost. There is reason for optimism in the conclusion of a series of settlements on outstanding problems between Russia and Japan. And on the other side of the world, in the Mediterranean area, a real possibility exists for an Italo-British settlement that would remove another danger spot.

The recent agreement on currency stabilization, promoted by the United States, Great Britain and France, is also a harbinger of hope. So is the related fact that more and more nations are turning away from the attempt to achieve self-containment and are eager to participate in a general revival of world trade. In that connection Mr. Hull's reciprocal trade treaties are distinctly encouraging.

Most important of all, perhaps, is the fact that the world is truly beginning to emerge from the economic slough of despondency in which it has been floundering for several years. In Great Britain more are employed today than at the peak of the boom in September, 1929. The rising tide of prosperity is clearly visible in this country.

The tensions which still grip the world grew steadily as the depression deepened. The growth of armaments, the pressure for imperialistic expansion, the intensification of nationalism, particularly on its economic side—all these explosive developments fed on the misery of the peoples. With this economic pressure relaxed, there is good reason to believe that the tensions will also lessen and, barring accidents, bring a period of real peace.

Then the task of international appeasement can once more be undertaken and the attempt once more made to create a world order having some harmony with the hopes of those whose memories we reverence on this day.

"Temporarily, the sense of hearing is considerably dulled by eating," asserts a physician. Kindly nature does the best she can to protect us from after-dinner speakers.

"Under secret service rules, every one who approaches the President must do so with empty hands." Yes, but must they be outstretched, palms upward?

Most of man's scurrying about isn't done in the pursuit of happiness, but in a desperate effort to outrun old man trouble.

St. Paul's Words.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Scriptural support for his contention for the justice and propriety of laws compelling school children to salute the flag, regardless of their religious teachings, Mr. George S. Duncan, in his letter appearing in your issue of November 5, cites the greetings and salutations to certain persons commended by St. Paul for their loyalty and devotion to the cause of Christ. To so interpret these greetings and salutations does an injustice to St. Paul, does violence to the language of the texts and is a plain distortion of the purport and intention of St. Paul in recommending these salutations.

St. Paul detested the appearance of idolatry in any form (Acts, XVII: 16), whether it was idolatry of creatures, emblems of earthly things, images of heavenly things, or altars to unknown gods, as his discourse to the Athenians on Mars Hill recorded in Acts XVII: 21 to 32 will attest.

Houdini Seance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was absurd for people to try to get the spirit of Houdini, with an audience of over 200 morbid curiosity seekers (knowing little or nothing about psychism). The inner circle of 12 sincere seekers would have been sufficient.

Among the hundreds of spectators, the presence of a few doubting Thomases would have been enough to break the power of the psychic circle and keep Houdini's soul out of it.

For another thing, the use of a trumpet at a seance is superfluous. I have reason to believe that most, if not all, trumpet-work is a fraud. The spirit needs no dead, inanimate objects through which to manifest itself, but merely the living bodies of mediums, using the solar plexus in which to form. A materializing cabinet helps, as does also the setting for automatic writings. Among other forms of "psychic phenomena" which I consider fakes are slate-writing and "spirit" photography.

Before each seance-sitting the sitters should be instructed to see with the inner-eye (with the two physical eyes closed) and in the use of the chemical bismuth, and the proper use of candles, appropriate singing and invocation to high spirits, and even after that they may have to sit for two hours before getting results.

Inasmuch as Houdini manifested himself to Mrs. Houdini through Arthur Ford, a New York medium, on a previous occasion, I do not see where it is necessary for his spirit to come back again in order to give proof of spirit return.

Spain And Neutrality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sure you want the truth. I cannot see any reason under Heaven why you would want the Communists to win in Spain.

We all deplore this horrible war, but how can you close your eyes to the fact that the Spanish people rose up to defend their country from a tyranny worse than ever existed in this country under English rule?

Side-Wheel History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noticed two communications in your paper concerning the use of side-wheelers in 1886, and for those interested I wish to add the following:

At the time mentioned there were no side-wheel ships in the Western Ocean trade. Although the Scotia, the last side-wheeler built in 1862 for the Cunard Line, was still afloat, she was not in service. The White Star Line never did have any and Lamport & Holt were not in the trade.

At the time mentioned there were lots of side-wheel steam boats in this country, but very few side-wheel steamships, there being the Old Dominion, Hatteras and Wyanoke, of the Old Dominion Line, New York to Norfolk.

There were also the Gussie, Clinton, Morgan and Harlan, of the Morgan Line, running between New Orleans, Cedar Keys, Key West, Havana, New Orleans and Texas ports, and the City of Monticello (Capt. Joseph McKee) running with the City of Palatka (Capt. Leo Vogel) between Charleston, Jacksonville and Palatka.

Then there is still with us the side-wheeler St. John, which in her early days rigged as a two-masted side-wheel ship ran between New York and Long Branch outside in the summer, and Charleston and Palatka in the winter, and later, for years, ran on the Potomac River and is now operating out of Baltimore as the Tolchester.

The Old Dominion ended her days as a coal barge. The Gussie was last heard of running on the coast of Venezuela. The Morgan and Clinton were dismantled some time ago. The Harlan was wrecked in Bluefield Harbor, Nicaragua, and her main shaft is used there as a mooring post for mahogany rafts. The City of Monticello was lost with all hands in November, 1900, off Yarmouth, Nova Scotia.

Use Of "Spiritual."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of the D. A. R. and an otherwise, I hope, good American citizen, it was with a faint feeling of nausea that I read in a description of the parade in your issue of November 7 a reference to the many Americans to whom President Roosevelt appears "not so much as a person, as a spiritual light."

I think even President Roosevelt would experience a shock at this. However hysterical people may become in speech, there is no excuse for being maudlin in the written word. "Spiritual" and "spirituality" are words not to be used lightly or indiscriminately.

Countless persons today have proved the intimate relationship between spiritual seeking and economic security, but the world as a whole ignores the simple, scientific advice of Jesus and looks in every other direction but this one—looks to relief, benefit payments, federally created jobs and human, experimental policies and theories of men. But let us at least be honest enough, discriminating enough, not to call this seeking "spiritual light."

Intelligence Of Voters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to see an estimate, based on Army intelligence tests during the World War, of what proportion of those who voted in this election had the intelligence to understand the issues.

My impression is that a large number of our voting population has a mental age of 12 years or under, and that an even larger number vote on prejudice rather than principle.

It is the height of absurdity for the Administration to claim a "mandate from the people" when so large a part of the electorate votes ignorantly or blindly, according to political machine dictation or according to prejudices based on vague notions of the issues involved.

The Civic Welcome.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your suggestions that the populace of Washington turn out to greet Mr. Roosevelt on his post-election return seem to me an indication that your customary political far-sightedness has deserted you.

It is of course a graceful gesture to greet anybody and to congratulate him upon his success. Such a demonstration for the President in New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore would be entirely appropriate. In Washington, however, it seems to me that the greetings of the united job-holders have the flavor of a mass demonstration at Gary, Ind., to congratulate Mr. Farrell on re-election as president of the United States Steel Corporation.

The Federal Capital City was designed to be a place removed from political partisanship insofar as its populace is concerned. The great vice of the Washington atmosphere seems to me to be an exaggerated mutual self-esteem on the part of the Federal employes, from Cabinet officers down. They should be the servants of the people and should know it. They tend to be the masters of the people, and a demonstration, while in form a non-partisan tribute to a great man, is more nearly in fact the demonstration either of the present equivalent of the Praetorian Guard (in civilian dress) or the "arranged" demonstration in the style of Mussolini or Hitler.

WILSONIAN DEMOCRAT.
Baltimore, Nov. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't know whether I ever can pin faith to The Post again. You see, you greatly aided and abetted me in my disbelief in the New Deal and all its works. I had my own ideas, of course, about all that went on in the name of recovery, social justice, and what not, and each day I found my opinions fortified by what I found in The Post.

But I tell you frankly it was a jolt, and a terrible one, to wake up on the morning of November 5 and find myself summoned by that same Post to join in a big to-do in honor of the returning victorious Chieftain. I nearly strangled, and being the stiff-necked Republican I've always been since I was 10 years old, of course I did not join. In fact, I find myself feeling just the sort of outcast of whom the following story is told:

A teacher was quizzing her pupils on current events, and tritely inquired, "Now children, who gave us the NRA?" Answer, "President Roosevelt." "And who sponsored the AAA?" "President Roosevelt." "Now tell me who is responsible for our WPA?" "President Roosevelt." "That is fine. And who made all the birds and the trees and the beautiful flowers we have?"

An alert pupil responded, "God." Came a guttural suggestion from the rear: "Put that dumb Republican out."

A LET-DOWN CITIZEN.
Washington, Nov. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I voted for Roosevelt. I hold a New Deal job. But I question the wisdom of the suggestion made on the front page of The Post for November 5 and carried out with such gusto by Washington citizens.

I have been in Germany and in Italy when citizens were giving to Hitler and to Mussolini similar "welcomes," and I have seen the heady intoxication brought on by such demonstrations of popularity and power. With thousands of other thoughtful Democrats who voted for Roosevelt, I regret his tremendous plurality and I view with alarm any attempt on the part of the press to build him up further as an object of popular adoration. His greatest weakness is his love of popularity and his willingness to sacrifice principles for public approval.

The Post can better serve the public interest by a consistent policy of critical appraisal of Mr. Roosevelt's character and leadership than by furthering public emotional demonstrations in his behalf.

The Post is too dignified a newspaper to be caught trying to jump onto the bandwagon, and too wise in its leadership not to recognize the very real dangers inherent in Mr. Roosevelt's character and in his tremendous personal popularity.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Miami Mugging.

THE charming cities of Miami and Miami Beach are adopting a winter regulation which will require the finger-printing of certain classes of American workmen, who will also be compelled to carry police identity cards. The object is to exclude the criminal element—and a very worthy aim that it, to be sure. But a knowledge of conditions in the two communities suggests that the authorities are going about it the wrong way, for the criminal element which frequents the pleasure coast in winter is not addicted to toil.

The footloose itinerants who follow the sun to scramble for mean little jobs running elevators, washing dishes, carrying suitcases and serving drinks undoubtedly do include some undesirable individuals. There are waiters among them who do not know how to serve a glass of water and bellhops who pause after they have set down the bags and snapped up the shades to inquire with a certain meaning, "Now, will there be anything else?"

* * * *

That is to be expected, however, in almost any city, and the fact remains that long ago the two Miamis cordially invited many criminals of serious importance to move in and make their headquarters there during the winters. Al Capone was a distinguished winter resident, and many of his colleagues in the rackets were attracted from Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Atlantic City and other cities of the North. And the first thing the two Miamis knew, in the hustle of the big boom and the confusion of the shakedown period which followed, the underworld had taken a firm hand in the local government.

Everybody in the Miamis has known about this for years and Mr. Jimmy Cox, who ran for President that time, through his Miami newspaper has crusaded now and again to break up the partnership between the Northern underworld and local and State politics.

Gambling houses, which are distinctly an underworld institution, have persisted in spite of periodic raids and more or less earnest drives to clean up the two towns. The difficulty has been that many of the local business men thought it was necessary to tolerate a little gambling to attract the spenders from the North.

But they discovered that a little gambling in a town is the same as a few rats in a corncrib, and they were overrun not only with professional dealers and operators, who are not entirely offensive, but with all the varieties of swindler, blackmailer and jewel thief who follow the trade.

Their local politicians fell to grafting and graft found its way to to the State Capitol at Tallahassee, and any honest cleanup of the criminal element would have to ignore the waiters, bellhops and dishwashers and start off by sending to prison some of the most prominent citizens.

Then, too, a race track always attracts a criminal element whose members do not have to stoop to common working-class jobs, but live in considerable splendor. Miami has two race tracks. In fact, the community which will now impose on ordinary working people the humiliating process of finger-printing and mugging did not hesitate to welcome one group of race-track operators who were known the country over as bootleggers and whose horse park was known as the racketeers' track.

I am not certain that all this is anybody's business outside the two Miamis, but it does seem to concern the rest of the country and working people in general that men and women fall under suspicion and have to report to the police anywhere in the United States of America because they display a willingness to work, while notorious criminals are deemed to be desirable only because they are in the money.

For several years now Florida has also imposed interstate immigration restrictions to keep out "undesirables," with money the only qualification. This meant that Dutch Schultz, a Lucky Luciano or a Little Augie could and did ride across the line in the fast plane or in the drawing room of a de luxe train to a cordial welcome, while, for an extreme example, a broke but horny-handed workman, in a faded shirt, but pure in heart, might be turned back at the border by armed men.

Florida never suffered much from the petty crimes of the hotel and restaurant help, but might have been spared trouble if the muggings and finger-printing had been applied to some of her own financiers and politicians long ago.

Inaugural Parade Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a little more than two months will occur the inauguration of President Roosevelt as he enters upon his second term. In connection with those exercises there will doubtless be a parade, and if the custom of other years is followed it will be strictly military in character. There will be soldiers on foot and soldiers on horseback, batteries of guns, bands and flags. No one objects to the bands and the flags, but a good many are wondering why we need to have the military display every time we inaugurate a President. Schools will be dismissed and thousands of children will view the spectacle. They will be thrilled by it, of course, and will thoroughly enjoy it.

But are we not by this means unconsciously glorifying war and is that what we want to do? I suggest a parade that will glorify peace. Why not floats of a dignified character that will emphasize the progress of arts and sciences, of industry and education. Let the bands play and the flags wave, but, for once, can we not do without the military? Would not a parade of this nature be a magnificent gesture to advertise the fact that we are a peace-minded Nation?

The inaugural committee will soon be appointed. I respectfully suggest to them that heavy arms and light arms, infantry and cavalry, marines, cadets, middies and everything suggestive of war be given a rest on January 20 and that we go in for a display of the peaceful arts.

A Washingtonian Writes of China

Alice Tisdale Hobart Follows Up 'River Supreme' and 'Oil for the Lamps of China' With Another Book on China in Which a Young Doctor Fights Gallantly Against Great Odds.

Scene in China Today

By E. M. Miller.

The meaning of this curious title emerges at the peak of the series of big and little crises which constitute the third volume of Alice Tisdale Hobart's experiences in China, the first two of which were "River Supreme" and "Oil for the Lamps of China." They dealt largely with the infiltration of Western business organization and the introduction of modern machinery into the land of the Great Wall. This third book strikes a nice balance between the personal life of an American doctor and his family and the mission group of which they are members. It also gives an adequate picture of the way in which the problems of the country are reflected in those of the "Compound."

"Yang and Yin" is the Chinese symbol of the two forces of life: yang the active and yin the passive. This bit of symbolism permeates every phase of life in China—it is the pivot on which balance darkness and light, energy and inertia, spiritual and material. Mrs. Hobart says in her preface that "man's mystic need is to keep their harmony," and this touch of mysticism influences the entire writing of her book. And apparently the American whose efforts are directed toward combating the superstitions of an alien culture is not wholly untouched by the very forces which he strives to conquer.

Peter Fraser goes to China at the turn of the century to practice medicine. He is part of the missionary group of the city where he takes charge of the "compound." However, he is not actually a missionary in the narrowest sense of the word and is continually annoyed by the fact that he is handicapped by mission problems. He marries Diana Moreland, teacher in one of the American schools transplanted to that far-off country. His years of relationship with her, ideal at first and then gradually maturing into what another novelist might have termed incompatibility, take on a dignity which only the author's careful and earnest approach gives them.

Diana and Peter have three children. When the two older ones die during an epidemic, her entire consideration and attention is lavished on the child left. She returns to America without Peter, leaving him to carry on his work with the aid of the few Chinese who are friendly to his aims. She eventually returns and at the conclusion of the book they once more attain a slight degree of harmony in the "yang and yin" through the same medium that has straightened matters out for them before. And that is a crisis in the affairs of the outside world which demands their energies and thought. Yet never throughout the whole book does one ever get the close feeling of companionship between them which bound together the lives of Dr. Arrowsmith and his wife as they sought to heal suffering under similar difficulties.

Probably of greater interest to the reader than the story of Peter and Diana are the glimpses into the lives of the Chinese. True, Mrs. Hobart seems to look on the whole panorama with an Occidental viewpoint, but her writing does not lose anything by that fault, if fault it be. It lends a simple objectivity which cannot always be found in the writing of Pearl Buck. The Chinese are a taciturn race; they are tradition-bound and reluctant to open their minds and homes to a quickened tempo. Such reticence does not allow for a great amount of penetration into their quiet and shuttered mode of living.

The conflict between old and new China is shown most graphically in Sen Lo Shih, the son of Sen, and in Sen S. Mo, widow of one of scholar Sen's sons. We see Peter in the beginning of his practice almost run down by Sen's ricksha. Then that worthy's downfall is traced through his raising opium in defiance of the new laws to the final act of suicide which leaves his son to find a place in the new China. Lo Shih scorns honorable suicide because his family had lost face, and instead becomes a doctor. These two Chinese run their cycles and their fate is resolved differently: Sen S Mo goes on a pilgramage to Buddha; Lo Shih, after a turn at political agitation, returns to the hospital.

The scientific facts in "Yang and Yin" were the contributions of a doctor in San Francisco; the background was indelibly etched on Mrs. Hobart's mind during her years' stay in China, and for the story and character delineation the author has fallen back on her fertile imagination and keen story-teller's sense.

Armistice Day 1918

November 10th.

Charley died this morning. I held his hand as he went and could not keep back the tears. Near the end he saw me crying and patted my hand with his two living fingers to comfort me. I cannot describe that boy's sweetness. He took part of my heart with him. Everybody around the place was in tears.

Just after he went someone came into the ward and said, "Armistice! The staff cars have just passed by the gate on their way to Senlis to sign an armistice!"

What a time and place to come shouting about an armistice. I said, "Sh! Sh!"

There is no armistice for Charley or for any of the others in that ward. One of the boys began to sob. I went and talked soothingly to him, but what could I say, knowing he would die before night?

Well, it's over. I have to keep telling myself it's over, it's over, it's over.

But there still is that letter to write to Charley's mother. I can hear commotion and shouting through the hospital as I write this. The chapel bell is ringing wildly.

I am glad it is over, but my heart is heavy as lead. Must write that letter.

One of the girls came looking for me. They have opened champagne for the staff in the dining hall. I told her to get out.

Can't seem to pull myself together."

The above excerpt was taken from Shirley Millard's book "I Saw Them Die," published by Harcourt, Brace & Co. for $1.50. It is a record of men blinded, maimed, hopelessly crippled, uttering no word of protest as reconstructed from the diary of Miss Millard, who was a volunteer nurse when the big German push of 1918 was at its height.

Letters of a War Nurse

Alice Lord O'Brian Publishes Her Correspondence on the Travail of 1917

By Barnet Nover.

Almost immediately after the United States entered the war, Alice Lord O'Brian, member of a noted Buffalo family, volunteered for service with the American Red Cross in France. She remained in that country until the spring of 1919, seeing varied service as worker and later directress of a large canteen in the Vichy district; in the evacuation hospital at Chaligny, just back of the lines, and, at the end of the war, as organizer and manager of a huge military hotel in Paris. For her services to the allies she was twice decorated by the French government.

Miss O'Brian's war record, excellent as it was, was neither unique nor spectacular. The devotion she showed, the energy and efficiency she displayed, often at the cost of her health, in caring for those who came under her care during her stay in France, was part and parcel of a war effort in which millions participated in countless ways. But it is that very circumstance which gives this collection of her letters its real interest and value.

Much water has passed under the bridge since those days of high exaltation and great endeavor, when it seemed to so many that a new and better world was certain to emerge from the travail of war. The mood of that era has long since vanished. Those glowing phrases of 1917 and 1918 have turned dust and ashes in our mouths and all the idealism, all the hopes, all the dreams for which men and women made such sacrifices seem now, in retrospect, to have been crowned with futility.

For those whose memories go back a score of years, reading this book, therefore, will be like opening the door to a room long ago closed to human habitation. The letters arouse forgotten echoes and help recapture old moods even while mocking them. But it is precisely because of the perspective that we have acquired that the experience is a worthwhile one.

It was with no motive of self-glorification that she permitted the publication of letters intended solely for the eyes of her own family. She has done so, she says in the foreword, because "a new generation has grown up, apparently inclined to experiment with the same futility into which we all plunged a score of years ago." "It seems to me," she adds, "that perhaps a few might find a deterring influence in this simple account of daily happenings in a background of grave events and profound tragedy and I only hope that these apparently uneventful letters may help keep some of us from glorifying war."

The book, therefore, serves a double purpose. It provides a wholly contemporaneous and unadorned account of how the war looked to a strong and ardent personality who, while for the most part stationed behind the lines, nevertheless came into direct and poignant contact with the wreckage left by the struggle. But, by the same token, it throws into sharp focus the disillusionment that has set in since those days, and rightly so. Of what earthly good, one cannot help but ask now, were all these sacrifices of time and energy and life itself?

The Alice Lord O'Brians of 1917 and 1918 never raised such questions. They threw their abundant energy into the task before them and performed, as this book reveals, superhuman feats without complaining. The drudgery that was their share, whether in a canteen in France or elsewhere, they regarded as romantic since it was bound up with what seemed to them a high and noble purpose. Not once in any of these letters, full as they are of vivid description often touched by humor, is there any indication of any doubt as to the nobility of the cause she served. But the Alice Lord O'Brians of today, viewing a world which has forgotten what war meant, which is again preparing to plunge into catastrophe despite the futility of the previous effort, think otherwise.

Aftermath of War

Two Books Show Effect of World War on Lives of Soldiers and of Non-Combatants

"NIGHT OUTLASTS THE WHIPPOORWILL," by Sterling North. (Macmillan, $2.50.)

Sterling North has written a book about the World War, not the bloody, futile butchery on the fields of France, but the mob lusts, mob tyrannies, hectic enthusiasms, and private hopes and secret fears of the people of a small town during those brief months that have so vitally altered our social processes, our thinking and our morals. It was a made-to-order period for the novelist. In that short space of months a Nation that had been sputtering and fuming through a Victorian adolescence grew up. Those growing pains of a Nation were reflected in individuals; few remained static. They grew prodigiously or they fell ignobly or tragically; some suffered quietly, and others preyed on suffering. It was an era of public and personal upheaval.

North has taken that period as the background of his novel, with the scene laid in a small Midwestern town, Brailsford Junction, Wis. He has pried into the little lusts, the private struggles, the patriotism, pettiness, and cynicism of a little group.

He has taken his title from a poem by Campbell, and has woven into the texture of history his heroine's childhood fear that something terrible would happen if she stayed awake long enough to hear the end of the whippoorwill's night cries. But night outlasts the whippoorwill, and life goes on, after the searing torment of war, as she discovers to her humiliation, and eventual content.

His picture of the little town is accurate, as his knowledge of it is detailed and intimate. But his characters are the stock-in-trade characters of any novelist. Even Paul, whose irony against platitudes is full of platitudes, is typical of newspapermen of fiction. Early Ann, the heroine, is scarcely distinguishable from other heroines, except perhaps for a moment of human weakness.

They are perhaps standardized by the demands of North's story, a picture of a small town awakening to, and subsiding from, the universal madness of a war-maddened world. The picture is accurate and at times dramatic, but it never rises to great heights. It never becomes an articulate condemnation of war.

DOUGLAS STAPLETON.

"SHERSTON'S PROGRESS," by Siegfried Sassoon. (Doubleday, Doran, $2.)

Eternally, like the snows of winter and blossoms in spring, we have our literary records of the war, notably the tales and poems of Siegfried Sassoon, combatant in His Majesty's forces, and the George Sherston of "Memoirs of a Fox Hunting Man," "Memoirs of an Infantry Officer," and of the last volume of this series, "Sherston's Progress."

Suffering from an anti-war complex, brought on more by the strain of the front line than by his pacifism, Sherston (Sassoon) is convalescent in a war hospital outside of Edinburgh. Here, with the subtle assistance of Dr. Rivers, golf and Father Rosary's champagne, he makes his compromise with a rebellion against war—to accept a brief vacation in Ireland, where he enjoys hilarious adventures with the jovial, inebriated Mr. Blarnett, known as "The Mister," a mysterious fox-hunting squire who made his fortune in America and his fun around Limerick.

Sherston's vacation, if we may call training raw recruits on an island with no love for British officers, a vacation, was ended by his embarkation for the Old Testament landscapes of Egyptian encampments and eventual return to the French front, where he is subsequently wounded, ironically enough, by a member of his own company, and returned to a London hospital and the conviction that the war was a dirty trick played on him and his generation.

Here then, in beautiful prose, we find the record of man's compromise with war, the compromise of one who hated the agony, the shell shock and the mud and death, but who was drawn irresistably back as a chip in a whirlpool, to that place where ". . . the Boches are overhead, dropping bombs on neighboring villages. Shattering din and organ-drone of planes going on now . . . but nothing matters except the company." So, we leave George Sherston to his path, going the muddled way of a gentleman and a man.

Rainbow Division

"AMERICANS ALL—THE RAINBOW AT WAR," by Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly. (Heer Pub. Co., $3.)

The story has now been told!

"Americans All—The Rainbow at War," by Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, the national historian of the Rainbow Division Veterans, is the first and only official history of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division in the World War. It satisfactorily answers all questions relating to the forming of this history-making combat division, its name, Rainbow, and the enviable record made by it in France. Here is a history that is an intensely fast moving picture, flashing with truth as brilliantly glorious in color as the insignia on the arms of the soldiers whose achievements it describes.

There are numerous illustrations and actual scenes from the theater of thundering artillery, bursting grenades and the fiery mouths of machine guns. There are also official maps of troop movements, with locations of fighting units clearly identified.

"Americans All" is bound in a handsome five-color cover in the hues of the rainbow. It is a history every American soldier, sailor and marine will want to peruse and then to reread. It is a book that will prove highly prized in every American home.

The limited first edition already has been over subscribed by former members of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division.

Ten minutes on the set and within that period Director Al Green, Jean Arthur (nice of Jean, who does not appear jealous) and half a dozen others advised: "Keep your eyes on this Kent girl. She's a real find."

BELL.

I would have met this charmingly ingenuous young player earlier in the day if I had been able to make the press preview of "Tarzan Escapes," in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday at 1:30. As it was, what with RKO-Keith's breaking out a new bill and all, she came around to see me at about 4:30 or 5. Quite a gal, this Tarzana.

Although not greatly versed in the habits and customs of the chimpanzees, this young lady, under the chaperonage of Capt. and Mrs. Pfiefer, seemed to me one of the most diffident, unobtrusive, but, withal, affectionate, youngsters I have ever met.

There is only one thing I don't like about the girl and that, no doubt, is due to my innate bachelor bashfulness. Left to her own devices, and you to yours, Tarzana, more likely than not, will climb up your pant leg, cuddle in your lap, encircle your neck with her slightly furry arms and kiss you gently on the cheek.

I should live all my life and have a chimpanzee the first to do that!

Tarzana, however, leaving her social usages out of the discussion for the moment, is a grand little actress. You will discover that when you see her in "Tarzan Escapes," on the screen at Loew's Capitol, beginning Friday.

But that pal of hers, in the big black box! Ugh!

When Ray Bell—no relation—engineered the party into the tesselated elegance of the drayma department, I thought he was lugging along a portable phonograph for purposes of musical accompaniment. When he raised the lid, with all of us who had gathered around expecting to hear the dulcet strains of "Did I Remember," or something, what bobbed up but Johnny Weissmuller's pet, 9-foot boa constrictor, which also plays a part in the picture.

A beautiful specimen, this particular constrictor, if you care for such things, but me, personally, I like snakes exactly to the degree that I love the typhoid fever or an attack of the rabies.

But the thing was sort of fascinatingly lovely, at that, with its clean marking, delicately shaped head and forked tongue, that kept flashing in and out of its mouth in an apparently utterly harmless manner.

Just the same, you can have the snake and I'll take Tarzana, my first crush in years.

Ain't love grand!

Contracting the pernicious habit of breaking in its new bills at almost any time the impulse prompts, Loew's Columbia Theater announces that the repeat engagement of "The Big Broadcast of 1937" will begin on Thursday of this week, instead of the theoretically regular Friday. This is the picture that starts at a snail's pace and ends with the rush of a comet. If you haven't already followed its corruscating course across the silver sheet, Thursday wouldn't be too soon to get about it. And at the Metropolitan today, to make matters worse, "Cain and Mabel."

• • • •

As one contemplates the first evening of one-act plays presented by Noel Coward and his splendid supporting ensemble in the National Theater, the conviction grows that here is a young author-actor-composer-director with a positive genius for "theater."

The diversity with which he is able to imbue his miniature works, as well as his own performance of the major male roles in them, is as remarkable as the degree to which Cornelia Otis Skinner, for example, is able to hold an audience by the sheer versatility of her solo vignettes of large casts of imaginary characters.

It was my thought on Monday night in watching Mr. Coward, Gertrude Lawrence and Joyce Carey in "The Astonished Heart" that here was a minor tragedy that was much less sound, psychologically, than its perfect writing and interpretation made it appear. It is extremely difficult to fit the character of the wife in this multiple-scene sketch into the average pattern of even the most liberal of modern helpmeets. The playlet, nevertheless, leaves a definite and deep stamp upon memory.

If tonight's new bill of plays and Friday night's third contribute so generously to the repute of this almost abandoned form of dramatic expression as Monday night's, Noel Coward will have done for a neglected branch of the theater what the D'Oyly Carte Company of his compatriots have done for the Savoyard operas.

And that is a very great service, indeed.

• • • •

In case you simply must have something to call that boa constrictor of Johnny Weissmuller's that Ray Bell is dragging around in that old phonograph case, he tells me the name is Reptina—which sounds reasonable. You still can have her.

The first suggested cast for the picturization of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," I am happy to report, comes from Mrs. William Atherton DuPuy, in collaboration, one gathers, with her daughter, Mrs. Edward N. Dingley, jr.

Personal aside to Mrs. DuPuy: My very deep gratitude for the last paragraph of your letter. That is what Hobart Bosworth so aptly terms "a writer's round of applause."

• • • •

The-Eternal-Unities Note.

Are Cast Together Again on Screen

Having played together with such success in "Poor Little Rich Girl," Shirley Temple and Alice Faye have been recast for important roles in "Stowaway," now being made on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Hollywood, known to the trade as "Movietone City." The tiny Temple sings and speaks in Chinese in this subject, which seems carrying the business just a mite too far—English, for one of her years, is tough enough.

Cannery Story Fails to Make Grade as Film

'President's Mystery' Has Handicap of Propaganda as Its Major Burden.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE PRESIDENT'S MYSTERY," Republic Pictures' filmization of a story concocted by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and written for a popular magazine by Rupert Hughes, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Anthony Abbott, Rita Weiman, S. S. Van Dine and John Erskine, adapted to the screen by Lester Cole and Nathaniel West, featuring Henry Wilcoxon, Betty Furness, Sidney Blackmer, Evelyn Brent, John Wray, Wade Boteler, Si Jenks and Arthur Aylesworth. Directed by Phil Rosen. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon.

Regardless of the distinguished origin of the basic idea upon which the plot of this picture is based, it seems to me there is slight justification for its presentation on the screen in the guise of entertainment.

There is, of course, the element of physical conflict to give the picture something of climacteric excitement, but I doubt that the matter of industrial co-operatives is a topic to engage the attention of the mass of mixed theater audiences, intent on pleasure rather than economic enlightenment.

In short, "The President's Mystery" has upon it the heavy hand of propaganda, seldom a diverting asset in the view of the amusement seeker.

Story of Familiar Origin.

The genesis of the story is that ancient device of occasioning the bogus demise of a rich man in worldly goods and prominent socially, who seems to have perished in an auto accident, but actually went on to a small town and took up the work of organizing a revolutionary industrial scheme to salvage a vast segment of humanity from the relief rolls.

That is the way it works out in the end, but only after a tedious running out of the old familiar line of argument against sabotage, boring from within and all the rest of it.

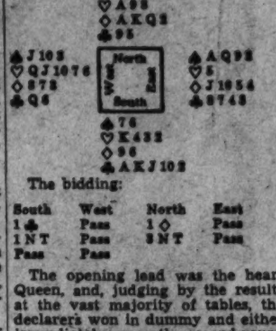
The principal roles are played with skill by Henry Wilcoxon and Betty Furness. As a matter of fact, I never have seen Wilcoxon before when he seemed so completely rationalized as in this subject. When Cecil B. De Mille brought him over to play in one of his most prodigious spectacles, this able Danish actor appeared definitely and permanently stamped with the sign of theatricalism as against any reasonable trade mark of realism or reality. His was an heroic bravado that seemed pitched a key too high for any acceptable sort of human being. That unfortunate impression is wholly dispelled by the present performance of this young man, who, after all, turns out to be merely a fellow of flesh, blood, tissues and marrow, more or less like all the rest of us.

MRS. CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Safety First.

The hand reported today occurred in a recent Midwest tournament. Although there was nothing difficult about arriving at, or fulfilling, the correct contract, surprisingly enough only one declarer out of more than a dozen was successful in the play. As is so often the case when this happens, the crux was a simple little safety play.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

The opening lead was the heart Queen, and, judging by the results at the vast majority of tables, the declarers won in dummy and either immediately, or on the second round took the club finesse. It is equally apparent that when the club Queen was thus allowed to win, all the West players promptly, and of course correctly, shifted to a spade. Obviously, this shift would give the defenders five tricks.

The one declarer who succeeded with his contract disdained the club finesse. He saw that it was unimportant, in so far as nine tricks were concerned, whether or not a club trick was lost to East, but further saw that it was dangerous to let West back on lead. He, therefore, laid down the Ace and King, not because he thought the Queen should drop but because he felt that any precaution he could take against West's getting the lead would be good insurance. His care was very well rewarded when the Queen dropped doubleton from West's hand.

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

He does his wife a fairly shabby trick, to be sure—yet not so shabby as to have murdered her, as he is suspected for a time of having done—but altogether he adds up on the right side.

Betty Furness is an ingenuous, if not too convincing, heroine, and Evelyn Brent comes back to the races briefly as the wife of the man in whom the story centers. She is as icy and staccato as usual. Sidney Blackmer, as the "menace" in the whole stuffy business of getting the canneries going again, and Barnett Parker, a comic butler not heretofore known to these eyes and ears, who brings the whole thing out right side up, are foremost among the support.

The bill is augmented by probably the most comprehensive and most disturbingly realistic visualization of the horror and the appalling disorganization of the Spanish civil war that has found its way to the screen. Consisting principally of gorilla warfare on the part of totally untrained and only partially equipped "armies," this demonstration of the glory of modern combat is as terrifying an exhibit of mankind's lust for slaughter as one could hope to find.

BRIDE-TO-BE

A New Romantic Serial

By VIDA HURST

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, owner of a prosperous paper manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, she has been working in his home where she has had to discourage the attentions of Francis, Jr., a madcap youth of her own age. Here also she has met, and become more than casually interested in, Philip Rhodes, architect nephew of her employer who has just returned after eight years in Mexico. Philip has a broken arm and Becky is called on to do some work for him. Also interested in Philip is Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow whom Philip had loved before her marriage. Lelia is a dinner guest in the Rhodes home the night Philip returns and the next day he goes to call on her, leaving word with Becky to telephone him in case an expected message arrives.

Now go on with the story:

Chapter 2.

The Rhodes household had not been so gay since its owner's illness. Old Friends of Philip and Regina, who were almost the same age, were constantly dropping in for cocktails or the evening. And always Lelia was included either as a member of the family party at home or the laughing group on its way to dinner or the theater.

Meantime, the plans for the dinner in Philip's honor were reaching mammoth proportions. A caterer was to have charge of the meal itself, but there were innumerable other preparations some of which fell to Becky, although they were definitely outside the range of her duties.

She discovered that working as a secretary in her employer's home had its disadvantages. Both his wife and married daughter seemed to consider her a sort of glorified servant. They called her "Becky" and introduced her to their friends, but she was expected to do any number of small chores they were not in the mood to perform for themselves.

At first, Mr. Rhodes had protested, but Becky, who missed the busy routine of the office, said she didn't mind. It was her own fault, she reminded herself, when she became involved in the preparations for the dinner. Mr. Rhodes gave up any attempt to transact business early in the day.

"I'll leave you in their hands," he had said as he left for his drive. Becky had no idea one dinner could cause such a commotion. Furniture was shifted to make way for an orchestra which was to play during the meal. Florists' assistants were busy arranging decorations. The drawing room, which had remained closed for weeks, was the center of almost as much activity as the big, old-fashioned dining room, where the table had been extended to the limit and was being set with a glittering array of gold-banded crystal and Royal Doulton china.

Philip had been back from Mexico almost two weeks, during which time Becky had seen nothing of him except for the occasional letters he dictated. He had offered to pay her for her time, but Becky, conscious that it really belonged to her employer, had refused. She liked to work for him. Especially when, as sometimes happened, he dictated a letter in Spanish. She had read the book of old Spanish poems he had given her and was in the middle of a novel by a more modern writer, but their relationship had remained as impersonal as it was on his first day. Lelia occupied his leisure hours to the exclusion of everyone else.

Becky was at the telephone reporting that domestic caviar had been sent instead of the imported variety which had been ordered when Philip came into the library.

"You look tired," he commented.

"I am—a little."

"If I had realized that this was Aunt Molly's idea of a few people in for dinner I'd have ducked it," he confessed.

Becky surveyed him with approval. He was looking less sardonic than when he had arrived, she decided.

"How is your wrist?" she asked.

"It's knitting," he grinned. "If you know what that means."

"I can imagine," she sympathized.

Full of Energy.

As she spoke Regina entered the library. Mrs. Albert Bickford Little, as she liked to be called, was the kind of woman who spent her life in constant social activity. She rode, swam and played contract with an energy which would have taken her places, her father said, if she had applied it in the business world.

Regina was too shrewd not to suspect that the knowledge that he was feathering his own nest had inspired his proposal, but she was not an emotional person. Marriage, as she had informed Lelia at the time, was a matter of using one's head.

Becky, like many others, could not understand the friendship which had existed since boarding-school days between the two women. Lelia was so softly glamorous. Regina so brittle and worldly wise. Even her voice was hard as she said "Becky, they have forgotten to polish the nut cups. Norah must help the caterer and Ralph is cleaning up after the florists * * * If you've nothing else to do perhaps you wouldn't mind doing it?"

Becky's olive cheeks flushed. More at Regina's tone than at the suggestion. Her manner implied that since Becky had nothing to do but chat with Philip . . . In other words, Mrs. Albert Bickford Little would show the little secretary with the big, green eyes and black eyebrows which Francis, jr., had asserted looked as if they were painted on, what she considered her place in the social scheme of things.

Beck understood it as did Philip, who cried, indignantly, "After all, Gina, Miss Stern can not be expected to polish the silver."

Regina replied coldly, "Father said she was to help us this afternoon. But naturally she does not have to do it unless she wants to."

"She would like to have me refuse," thought Becky saying quietly, "I'll be glad to do it for you, Mrs. Little!"

Philip's eyes were annoyed as she passed him on her way to the pantry where she found the discolored dishes stacked beside a jar of silver polish. A moment later, the swinging door opened to admit him.

"I'd help you," he insisted, "if I could use both hands. Regina ought to be ashamed of herself. I'm sorry!"

The silver polish clung to Becky's hands even after she had washed them. Her nails felt brittle and grimy, but the nut dishes stood in shining array on the pantry shelf. Long before she finished them Mrs. Rhodes had sent for her.

"Becky," she cried, "what have you been doing? I want you to go down town for me."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Rhodes! Mrs. Little asked me to polish the nut cups."

"Well, I should certainly think someone else could take care of that," her employer's wife commented ungrateful. "I need you. There is a list on the desk in the library. I can't send you in the big car, as Mr. Rhodes is using it, but if you know how to drive you can take the coupe."

"I drive my father's car all the time."

The day was warm for San Francisco. Becky's light woolen dress and coat which had been necessary for the early morning seemed uncomfortably heavy in the middle of the afternoon. The car was unfamiliar to her and the driveway called for expert manipulation of the wheel. The fact that Mrs. Rhodes was impatiently waiting for her return made it seem hours before she was started.

Once down town it was impossible to find a place to park. She finally put the car in a garage while she went to do her shopping. Salesgirls had never been so indifferent. Inefficiency delayed her at every point. It was almost two hours before she returned. She found Mrs. Rhodes pacing the floor, wringing her hands.

"Becky, where have you been? I thought you'd never come. Do you know that wretched caterss has taken ill and had to go home? Now at the last minute . . . I had to telephone almost every place in town before I found someone who wasn't busy. And it has delayed things so. Could you help with the canapes and hors-d'oeuvres? Arrange them all on the trays and see that nothing gets dried out? Francis, jr., is going to make the cocktails."

"Of course, Mrs. Rhodes! I'll be glad to do anything I can to help you," Becky said sympathetically.

"If you'll be responsible for that it will leave Norah free to help the caterss."

Aching with fatigue from the unaccustomed strain of being on her feet instead of sitting at her typewriter Becky stood for two more hours spreading tiny bits of toasted bread with caviar and anchovy paste and other delicacies.

She was still busy when the first guest arrived at 7 o'clock. Francis, jr., had suggested serving cocktails from the bar in the amusement room, but Mrs. Rhodes refused.

"This isn't one of your informal parties," she reminded him. "Cocktails will be served in the drawing room."

Francis, jr., was in his element standing among the array of bottles and glasses in the breakfast room which had been turned over to him for this purpose. He looked unusually handsome in his evening clothes, Becky decided, sadly conscious of her own appearance. The light beige-colored wool of her skirt was soiled. Her eyes were circled with weariness. There had been no time for her even to powder her nose.

"You look all in," Francis, jr., sympathized. "Aren't you glad Phil doesn't come home oftener than once in eight years?"

She looked at him too exhausted for levity.

"Hurry, Francis! The doorbell has been ringing. They're beginning to come."

"Probably the fair Lelia!" he grinned. "She's to sit next to Phil, by the way, I suppose mother's afraid to give any of the other gals a chance at him!"

But she said, ratherd sharply, "Why shouldn't she sit next to him?"

At which inauspicious moment Philip and Lelia appeared in the open doorway.

"She looks like a woman who knows herself to be loved," Becky thought, feeling worse than ever in comparison.

"That means one for you, too, I suppose," grinned the son of the house.

"Naturally! You wouldn't expect him to drink alone?" Lelia laughed.

"Becky is the one who really needs it," Philip said. "She's been working all day."

"None for me, thank you," she replied.

What she really wanted was a cup of hot tea, but there wasn't time . . . Lelia lifted her glass, looking like a lovely picture.

"To your return, Philip!"

"To you," he retorted gallantly.

Their eyes met for a moment then Lelia held out her hand.

"Come, darling, I must drag you back now or your Aunt Molly will be sending a searching party for you."

Something to Tell.

"Not his Aunt Molly!" commented Francis, jr., when they had gone. "Nothing would please her more than to have Lelia elope with him. You know, Becky, she told Philip last night that it had been in her mind when she planned this dinner that perhaps her dear Philip and Lelia would have something to tell her."

"Almost time to serve the cocktails, Francis! Is everything ready?"

"She shoud have known him better than to make a suggestion like that," he continued. "Do you know what he said?"

Unable to resist asking it, she faltered, "No! What?"

"He said, 'If and when I get ready to marry I probably won't tell anyone but the lady concerned!'"

"It sounds like him," she admitted.

The way Lelia had looked tonight there could be no doubt as to her feelings in the matter. Philip, trained to conceal his emotions, did not wear his heart upon his sleeve. Only on that first night when pain and shock had taken him off his guard had Becky seen any emotion in Philip's face. But he looked less moody.

The house boy's white-coated figure appeared now in the breakfast room door.

"Mrs. Rhodes is ready for the cocktails."

Becky gave the trays one last glance to see that nothing had been forgotten. As tney disappeared she stole into the back hall for her coat and hat. She caught the ripple of Lelia's laughter among the chatter from the drawing room.

Lelia's Night.

"This is certainly her night!" the other girl decided. "I wonder what it would be like to wear gorgeous clothes and have a man like Philip Rhodes in love with you."

Mrs. Rhodes had insisted that the chauffeur would take her home. He was waiting for her in the driveway. Becky lifted her face to the cool fragrance of a June night as she sank into the cushions of the car.

"What I would wish for now? To wear lovely clothes and ride in a car like this? With a dark, tawny-haired man beside me? He doesn't know I exist as it is now. I must have looked simply terrible. With my nose shining and my funny face. Why do I keep comparing myself to her? He wasn't even thinking about me. The reason he said what he did about my needing a drink was because he resented the way Regina spoke to me today."

She held her head high, but it was suddenly impossible to swallow over the lump in her throat. Loneliness she had never felt before swept over her. She was so different from those gay, sophisticated women who had nothing to do but play.

She said, "Good night, Thomas! Thank you for bringing me home," and went in to the dear familiarity of her own life. Her mother had kept her dinner in the oven for her.

"Sit down now, Becky, and I'll have it ready for you in just a moment," she said.

"I'm too tired to eat," the girl sighed. "All I want is a cup of tea."

She did not tell them it wasn't physical fatigue only which had exhausted her. Not even to herself would she admit how the contrast between herself and Lelia Meade had hurt.

Rooneys Head All-Star Show At the Grove

George Osmolowski Back At Troika; Casa Grande Plans Big Night.

By Chanticleer.

They're doing it again at the Cocoanut Grove this week. Meaning that the policy of giving the customers big-time names is going right ahead. This week it's Pat Rooney—the same Pat Rooney who headed vaudeville bills over the country for 25 years, and Pat Rooney 3d.

These Rooneys have set a few standards to follow from one generation to another and by this time it's a little tough on Pat the Third. But don't be fooled. He's a hoofer his dad can well be proud of. Then there's Jeanette Reed, of Ziegfeld fame, and Marie Brent, of stage and screen, to make a beautifully balanced and typically grand Rooney production.

Not neglecting the chorus of beautiful maidens, it should be mentioned that the "Suzuque" is being introduced at the Grove this week. That is a new dance creation from Harlem, where such little items as "truckin'" are conjured up just in the ordinary course of things.

• • • •

George Osmolowski is back. At the Russian Troika, of course. George has been missed at Helen Hamilton's rendezvous ever since the opening. For your benefit, in case you're not up on such details, George is the headwaiter—the gentleman with personality and a complete understanding of all that goes with the title of maitre d'hotel. But—here's one thing we cannot contribute. That is where George has been. Oh, well, his being back is enough.

Armistice night well mean something at the Casa Grande (former Dude Ranch), with Alice Louise in tap and comedy numbers, and Anota in Spanish dances of the rhumba and bolero type. There'll be noisemakers, confetti and the inevitable trick hats. And in addition—Dixie Dyer, Host Barrett's little mistress of ceremonies, is celebrating her first anniversary at the Casa Grande ranch. And a minimum of $1 for this special occasion.

Surprise item: Manager Jimmy Byrd is bringing a bona fide mystery girl to the Mayfair. A delightful voice, a really talented beauty. Jimmy hasn't said exactly when the "it" girl arives but it won't be long now. Of course, Noel and Jean Shannon and Jack Campbell are on deck as usual at the Mayfair.

The sweet music of a violin is just about guaranteed Madrillon patrons from 11 a. m., through the late hours of the evening these days. Arsenio Ralon, leading the trio, is on deck at the luncheon hour. Then Johnnie Shaw conducts his trio for the Four-Thirty Club, and later the Versatile Sextet takes over through dinner and supper hours. Senor Ralon (he's a Guatamalan) has developed a huge following because of his fine work. American tunes and Spanish as well. Johnnie Shaw puts a little more emphasis on the lilting-to-swing styles.

The "Gridiron Revue" is being held over at the Lotus with a few changes in featured entertainers. Mayo and Sheridan head the show in a soft-shoe and rhythm challenge number. Next is Vernon and St. Clair in a musical comedy skit and a verree lovelee waltz. Maria McGrath introduces something new in the way of a toe jazz number. Florence Hodges steps fast in "Stompin' at the Savoy." And Judy Ellington and Al Norton for the final touches.

Have you noticed the new note in the music of Milton Davis and his crew at the Hamilton Hotel's Rainbow room? If so, its the celeste—just added. It's shaped like a piano and it's harplike note offsets the sharpness of the brass instruments.

La Paree begins a six weeks' competition for amateur talent next Monday night—one as free from a commercial taint as any you'll ever hear about. The reward will be a week's engagement at La Paree as an act in the floor show. So—instead of giving prizes, which are all right if you collect cups and gadgets, this sponsor of the unarrived gives the winner what he wants most: a chance to appear professionally. Buddy Shaner, featured vocalist with Al Sakol's Band, got a start in exactly this way. Buddy won the finals of last year's amateur contest at La Paree. And —he's still there. On the pay roll.

Matt Windsor has a twinkling star—unheralded, comparatively unknown locally and yet as accomplished as some of the biggest stars in the business. She is the flashing, intricate-stepping Kepelova. A young girl but with grace and ability far beyond her years. She is an example of "the body being faster than the eye." Watch for that finish in her "Bachanail."

Just to make the matter of serious drinking more complicated, Maryland Club Gardens has engaged those Lyons girls to dance in the Crystal Bar. They're twins! Even the bartender gives up. He doesn't know which is which yet and he sees them every day. Crystal Bar helps the effect.

Anne Sigman and Stanley Fields, the Helen Wills and Tilden of table tennis are presenting a novel form of entertainment in the Shoreham Hotel floor show this week. Exhibition matches before the assembled guests every night—and Manager Moore has a standing offer of a bottle of champagne to anyone who will defeat Miss Sigman. And to do things up right, she gives a handicap of 10 points to all comers! They're from the Rainbow Room.

On the Air Today

The unpardonable in radio—a "dead spot"—will occur on the Blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. today. But it has been deliberately and appropriately planned as a feature of broadcasting's tribute to those who died in the World War. At 11 a. m. WMAL and other stations of the Blue network will be silent for two minutes.

10:45 a. m.—League of Remembrance program, talk by Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, WMAL.

11 a. m.—Program from Tomb of Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery; placing of wreath by President Roosevelt; talk by Gen. Frank Hines, WMAL and WOL.

12:30 p. m.—American Legion program, address by National Commander Harry W. Colmery, WRC.

1:15 p. m.—Canadian Club of New York luncheon, with Sir Gerald Campbell, British Consul General; G. Howard Ferguson, former Premier of Ontario; Phil Duey, barytone, and chorus of Royal Canadian Mounted Police, WRC.

2:15 p. m.—Four-way short-wave conversation, messages of peace and international good will, with David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; Robert Jardillier, French Minister of Communications; Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union, and Senator Guglielmo Marconi. Jardillier and Rambert will be heard from airplanes; Marconi from Rome. WRC.

3:00 p. m.—"Family of Nations," including talks by statesmen from Paris, Brussels, London and Warsaw. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler will speak from New York, introducing foreign statesmen now in the United States. WJSV.

3:30 p. m.—Annual Woodrow Wilson service from the Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral. Bishop James Freeman will make the commemoration address: Dr. James H. Taylor, of Central Presbyterian Church, Washington, will offer prayer.

5:00 p. m.—Veterans of Foreign Wars, with Commander Bernard W. Kearney and Auxiliary President Mrs. Gladys Mooney. Also University of Minnesota chanters. WMAL.

7:15 p. m.—M. Froome Barbour, commander of Disabled American Veterans, discussing new employment plan of the organization. WMAL.

10:45 p. m.—Meredith Willson and orchestra, from new Veterans' Hospital, Fort Miley, San Francisco. WMAL.

• • • •

Other features:

Dr. William Lyon Phelps—Pays tribute to "American Women" in "Magazine of the Air." WJSV, at 11 a. m.

From Valley Forge—From orderly room of Washington's headquarters, dramatic sketch in "Our American Schools," with brief talk by Harry W. Colmery, WMAL, at 6.

Ethel Barrymore—In radio adaptation of "The Shadow," first produced in 1915, WMAL, at 8:30.

Fred Allen—Presents as an amateur glee club the all-star South African Women's Field Hockey team, WRC, at 9.

Thirty-five representatives of broadcasting companies in European countries now visiting the United States, in connection with the tenth anniversary of the National Broadcasting Co., will visit Washington today. F. M. Russell, vice president of N. B. C., has arranged many social events for the distinguished guests. Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, will entertain foreign radio executives at a dinner tonight at the Shoreham.

• • • •

Here and there: Conrad Thibault, of whom we have not heard so much lately, is to guest with Fred Astaire next week . . . Harry Horlick, who conducted the "Gypsies" for so many years, is auditioning an orchestra for a new program . . . Joan Blaine is the radio actress portraying the "mysterious actress" in "Welcome Valley" . . . Ukelele Ike Edwards is expected to pop up as guest star on two shows before long, one of them being "Vallee's.

Court Remands Hoeppels, Bars Their Attorney

Delay Granted at Hearing on Extradition; New Counsel Retained.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Represented by new counsel after their attorney, Jesse C. Duke, was barred from practice in United States District Court today, Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, were remanded to Henrico County (Richmond) Jail tonight on a continuance of their removal hearing until Friday.

Federal Judge Robert N. Pollard granted the continuance to allow new counsel, Jacob Morewitz, of Newport News, Va., time in which to familiarize himself with the case. The Hoeppels are fighting return to Washington, where they are under sentences of four months to a year for conspiring to sell an appointment to the United States Military Academy.

The 56-year-old Congressman and his son, 24, were arrested in a tourist home on the outskirts of Richmond early November 7 on warrants charging them with being fugitives.

As court convened today Judge Pollard denied Duke's eligibility to appear before the bar.

"I have been notified by sources I cannot overlook that your actions in this case border on the crime of harboring criminals," the judge told the attorney.

"On your own admission you have been barred from the Federal District Court of the District of Columbia," Judge Pollard added. "Although you have practiced before this court and have maintained you are eligible to appear, the records fail to record your ever having qualified."

Judge Pollard said: "In view of this you may no further appear in this case."

He said, however, if Duke wished to apply for admission he would hear his plea in chambers "at a later time."

Round of Entertainment Set for Armistice Day

Mr. Prall and Mrs. Caldwell Will Hold Dinner Tonight for Radio Group; Veterans to Give Ball at Willard.

By Dudley Harmon.

Armistice Day entertaining in Washington being more civic than social, there are few private parties on the schedule for today. Most of the celebrating (although any celebration seems a little ironical in view of the present situation in Europe) will take the form of dinners or balls given by various patriotic societies.

In any event, smaller parties on the books for this afternoon would avoid conflict with one of the most important events of the season—the wedding of Miss Caroline Huston Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, to Mr. John Farr Simmons, of the State Department. Well over 100 invitations have been issued for the reception following their marriage, which takes place at 5:30 at the Sulgrave Club.

Members of society who aren't at the wedding this afternoon will doubtless be in Middleburg for the annual race meet of the Middleburg Hunt, which is held at the Glenwood estate of Mr. D. C. Sands, joint M. F. H. of the hunt. Five courses will be run each day of the meet, and since this is a holiday, it's safe to hazard the guess that there'll be a lot of entertaining by the country squires of the neighborhood in honor of out-of-town guests.

Entertainments Arranged.

Mr. T. B. Davis, of Middleburg, has issued invitations to a tea after the race today, and Mrs. Amory Perkins is entertaining at luncheon at her home there. Mrs. Perkins is going to build a new home in the spring, and has already finished a swimming pool.

Then, of course, there's that annual event, the Armistice Day ball being given this evening at the Willard by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Proceeds go to help widows and orphans of those who lost their lives in the World War, and among those who have taken boxes are the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson.

In keeping with the international spirit of the day, it is rather fitting that thirty-five representatives of various broadcasting companies of Europe should have arrived in Washington. They came from New York, where they participated in the celebrations attendant on the tenth anniversary of radio—of the National Broadcasting Company, to be specific. Numerous entertainments are being planned in their honor.

Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell will give a dinner at her home this evening for Mme. Robert Jardillier, wife of the French Minister of Communications; Mrs. Gladstone Murray, wife of the general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Commission, and Mrs. Arthur Gvozdanovie, wife of the vice president of the Yugoslavian Broadcasting Company.

At the same time Mr. Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and former member of Congress from New York, will entertain at a men's dinner party at the Shoreham, where the delegates are staying. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell will again entertain tomorrow from 5 to 7 at a large cocktail party at their home for the visiting delegates, for which over 500 invitations have been issued.

To hark back a bit in the social order of things—there has been no little entertaining recently for Signor and Signora Giuseppe Gabrielli, who have been guests of the air and military attache of the Fiat Co., in Italy. Signor Gabrielli has been touring this country investigating our commercial airports, and his wife, as fond of flying as he is, has accompanied him. They left yesterday for New York, and on Saturday will sail back to Italy on the Rex.

Earlier in the week, Lieut. Col. and Signora Coppola entertained at a dinner in honor of their guests at their home at 2129 Wyoming avenue. Those present included the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Suvich; the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, and the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun. Others there were the Counselor of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness Rossi Longhi; the First Secretary of the Embassy, Prince del Drago; Capt. and Mrs. William D. Puleston; the Chief of Air Corps and Mrs. Oscar Westover and Miss Florence Harris.

Society Notes

The Ambassador of Poland and Countess Potocka have left for a visit of several days in Chicago, where they will be entertained by Polish-American organizations, as well as by personal friends.

The Minister of Finland, Mr. Eero Jarnefelt, has gone to New York City, where he will attend the meeting of the committee members of the Finnish Travel Bureau. He will be there for several days and may be joined later in the week by Mme. Jarnefelt.

The United States Minister to the Dominican Republic, Mr. Arthur Schoenfeld, will be the ranking guest at a dinner to be given this evening by the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza at the legation in Sixteenth street.

Representative and Mrs. Stephen W. Gambrill have closed their home, Linden Manor, in Howard County, Md., and are at the Shoreham for the season.

Mr. Roger Gaucheron, First Secretary of the French Embassy, will sail the week of November 2 for a vacation in France.

Mme. Jules Jusserand, widow of the former Ambassador from France, will leave Washington this morning for New York, and will sail later in the day for Europe. She came to Washington after an absence of 12 years to participate in the unveiling in Rock Creek Park of a bench in memory of her husband.

Mme. Jusserand has been at the French Embassy since she left the White House, where she visited the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse went to New York yesterday to attend the closing events of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden last evening. They will return on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Hagner, of Washington, are at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., were luncheon guests recently of Mr. and Mrs. Williamson S. Howell, jr., in New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Erlie Talbott have issued invitations for a reception on Saturday, November 21, in honor of their daughter, Miss Henrietta Priscilla Talbott, in their residence at 3512 Massachusetts avenue.

Envoy Is Host At Mayflower

Dr. Castro Gives Luncheon Honoring U. S. Minister

Also Mr. Willard L. Beaulac, of the Latin-American Division of the State Department; Senor Dr. Don Miguel Angel Pena Valla, secretary of the Legation of El Salvador; Mr. Edward G. Trueblood, Dr. Jose G. Lewis and Señor Raul Diez de Medina.

Yugoslav Minister And Mme. Fotitch Are Dance Hosts

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch entertained last evening at a dinner dance at the legation on Sixteenth street. The spacious rooms were decorated with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums, and Mme. Fotitch, who recently returned from Europe, wore a gown of violet taffeta and a gardenia corsage.

Among the guests were many members of the Diplomatic Corps, including the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness Sant'Orsola, the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the First Secretary of the Embassy Mr. Roger Gaucheron, Third Secretary and Mme. Charles Saint, the Second Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. Philip Broad; Dr. Josef Nemecek and Mr. Otakar Kabelac of the Czechoslovakian Legation; the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter and the latter's sister, Miss Olga Patterson; Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal the Secretary of the Netherlands Legation, Jonkheer H. M. van der Wyck; the Secretary of the Portugese legation, Mr. Joao de Deus Ramos, and the Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Popovici.

Others there were Mr. Michal Budny and Mr. Edward Kulikowski, of the Polish Embassy; Dr. Ernst Meyer, First Secretary of the German Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling, of the State Department; Mr. Anis Azer, First Secretary of the Egyptian Legation; the Attache of Legation and Mme. Zoulfikar, the Secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic, who recently returned from Europe; Mlle. Marie Theresa de Laboulaye and her brother, M. Paul de Laboulaye; Miss Florence Harris, Miss Helen Garduno, Dr. Ivan Franges and Mr. Rastko Petrovic, of the Yugoslavian legation, the Misses Eleanor and Justine Corby and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Ashton.

Mrs. King Honors Miss Howes at Tea

Hessler Studio.

Mrs. William W. Howes, wife of the Acting Postmaster General, with their daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes, who is to make her debut during the Christmas holidays.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

What's in a name? Well, sometimes quite a bit. Why should the Nicaraguan Charge d'Affaires, Senor Dr. Don Henri De Bayle, like parties and dancing more than most others do? His name means "to dance" or "a ball—." Continuing with our little game. Who should have the most regal house among the foreign homes here? This time the answer is the Mexican Ambassador, Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera. Here the key is Castillo, which is the same as castle.

* * * *

The Senate daughters were ably represented tea dancing the other afternoon. Lila Townsend, whom we have missed about these parts for some time, now, went dancing by in the arms of some very tall chap. The two of them were chuckling delightedly over something. Lila, hatless, and wisely so (hats are trying to dance in no matter what the style) had on a black swing skirt and chic little blouse of a sprightly paisley design. We had not quite finished "noticing" them when we spotted Catherine Harrison in black. She, however, chose to remain hatted, and we would, too, if we had a hat like hers. It is a small brimless affair that perches on the very top of Catherine's sleek head, and has quantities of gay plaid velvet ribbon swirled around it.

Mrs. Theodore Schultz is a brave person indeed. With her husband, she has made her home for some time in Honolulu, that enchnating spot where the climate is without parallel, and now comes for the season to this particular neck of the woods, long famous for its unsympathetic winters.

The other afternoon she and Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter were talking over old times, when they had known each other in Panama, and of the horseback rides they had enjoyed. Gaily they laughed over the huge artillery horses astride which they had gone pounding down narrow paths through the jungles or along the coast.

That was before Mrs. Schultz's marriage to the colonel, and when she was making her home with her brother, Maj. Oliver Bucher, with whom she has been spending some time at Fort Monroe during the past several weeks.

Wasn't that Hope Jackson, trickily decked out in black and white checks with black accessories, whom we saw sauntering up Q street yesterday with the broadly smiling Larry Bundardeanu, of the Rumanian Legation?

* * *

A pretty foursome, bound for somewhere to have pictures taken for the Navy relief ball, when noontime and its army of tempting snack spots called a halt in the day's occupation, included Ethel Worthington, Alice Tuckerman, who, incidentally wears blue very, very well, indeed—Carlile Porter and little Anne Child.

Ethel's "big" sister, Marian, and her husband, Adam Keith Luke, are here for ever so briefly; in fact, leaving today to return to their home in New York. They did not fly this time, but might just as well have, for all the visit they made.

* * * *

Mrs. John Crosby gets away with the most unusual hats! No sooner did we see her wee Scotch toppiece of black felt and blink a couple of times at it, than we turned around and ran into her down on Connecticut avenue. The latest hat she sported was a bit of henna felt pulled and twisted (page a Kansas tornado) into a peak that looked to be a foot long and then, not satisfied with that added height—Mrs. C., who is very tiny, dainty and blonde—had two pheasant feathers on it extending still farther up. She doubtless was walking, being too "high hat" for any motor car.

No one should know the value of applause any beter than Noel Coward and when he is in on the audience side of the footlights, he is far from miserly with his clapping. He stopped in at the Carlton lounge and the orchestra, all primed and eagerly awaiting him, immediately struck up some of his musical successes. Highly pleased, not to say surprised, he beamed and applauded loud and long, much to the delight of everyone present.

Gertrude Lawrence, Noel Coward Guests At British Embassy

Mr. Noel Coward and Miss Gertrude Lawrence were guests at the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay yesterday at a luncheon at the embassy. Miss Joyce Carey and Mr. Alan Webb, also appearing in "Tonight at 8:30" at the National, were among the guests.

The other guests were the Military Attache of the Embassy and Mrs. W. T. Torr; the Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Hume Wrong; Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoyt, of Long Island, who are visiting Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay.

Miss Janet Richards Resumes Weekly Talks

Since Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, this season, will have her "Musical Mornings" on Monday, Miss Richards has changed to Wednesdays for her political talks.

This morning she will review the highlights on outstanding developments in the past six months, including special comment on the election results and on the changing European picture due to the Spanish war. In closing, she will touch upon unfamiliar aspects of life, in the Territory of Hawaii.

Son to Cuban Consul.

The Cuban Consul in Washington and Senora de Sera announce the birth of a son, Carlos Manuel, Monday at Columbia Hospital. The baby is named for the former President of Cuba, Senor Carlos Manuel Cespedes.

Other 1936 Debutantes Present; More Parties Will Be Given.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes, and one of this season's debutantes, yesterday afternoon was guest of honor at a tea given by Mrs. Neitah King at her apartment on Connecticut avenue.

Miss Howes wore a gown of paisley brocaded with a short tunic blouse buttoned to the neck and short puffed sleeves, and a long, close-fitting skirt. Her mother wore a black tailored dress and hat, and Mrs. King a gown of black velvet with red poppies at the belt. Receiving with them was Miss Frances Snowden Ehlen, one of the Baltimore debutantes, who wore a long full frock of powder blue taffeta.

Other Baltimore debutantes who were among the guests included the Misses Clarita and Anne Whiteley, who are coming out together this season, and Miss Betty Ryder.

Local Debutantes Present.

Among the Washington debutantes present were Miss Mary Agnes Young, in black velvet; Miss Bette Hartz, in black with fox furs; Miss Gloria Grosvenor, in a frock of burgundy red, and Miss Suzanne Kappler, in turquoise blue.

The girls who assisted included Miss Betty Galt, who wore a silver lame tunic over black; Miss Sylvine Clagett, in periwinkle blue velvet; Miss Dorothy Highfield, Miss Eula Council, and Miss Katherine Friant, daughter of the Special Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Julien N. Friant.

The guest of honor and Miss Young, Miss Nancy Wright, Miss Laura Johnson, Miss Manvilette Sullivan, Miss Frances Humphrey and Miss Betsy Simpson, are combining the festivities of the debutante season with shorthand, typing and filing, for all of them are taking business courses at the Temple School this winter.

Other Parties Planned.

Miss Kearsley Caldwell To Make Debut December 12

By Marylyn Reeve.

The year's crop of debutantes is growing by leaps and bounds and if this keeps on the number will far surpass those of other years. Miss Kearsley Caldwell is the most recent to make known her intentions of bowing to Capital Society this winter.

She is tall, with light brown hair, hazel eyes and a ready wit. All her life has been spent in Washington, not counting, of course, the summers with the family at Bay Head, N. J. She is the daughter of Mrs. George Kersley Caldwell, the former Miss Lillian Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge G. Davis, and one of the six "Davis Girls."

The Davises made their home in the lovely old house at 2211 R street which is now occupied by the Marshall Langhornes. The daughters, Myra, Maude and Ethel, now Mrs. John H. Snyder, of this city; Mrs. Alexander Tunstall, of Montclair, and Mrs. M. W. Stearns, of Maine, all made their bows at large teas given in their home. Lillian, the present debutante's mother, turned to serious ways of passing her time, just as her daughter is doing. In recent years it has become increasingly popular for young ladies to combine debuts and finishing school successfully, too, but Miss Caldwell is one of the first, if not the actual pioneer debutante out of school, to mix parties and exacting days at a desk.

Last year, through with the three R's, Miss Caldwell after looking around a bit, found herself a very pleasant secretarial position and was so intrigued with it—hard work and all—that she could scarcely tear herself away for any vacation, even to her beloved sea shore.

Having spent much time near the water, this debutante is accomplished in water sports. She plays the piano and sings when sufficiently urged to do so. She is a graceful dancer and has many a cut-in at balls and dances.

Mrs. Caldwell will present her daughter at a tea dance to be given the afternoon of December 12 in the Italian Garden at the Mayflower Hotel.

Health Director Host.

Dr. Luis Gutierrez, director of the Institute of Health Laboratories of the Republic of Mexico, who with Senora de Gutierrez is in the United States visiting the various medical and scientific centers, was host at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas. Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas entertained for Dr. Gutierrez and Senora de Gutierrez at a luncheon last Saturday.

Miss Catherine Reeve Wed to Lieut. Steele

A wedding, no previous announcement of which had been made, took place yesterday when Miss Catherine Ellen Reeve, daughter of Mr. William King Reeve and the late Mrs. Reeve, became the bride of Lieut. Stanley Foster Steele, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foster Steele, of Greensburg, Pa. The wedding took place at her father's home in Georgetown at 2 p. m., Maj. Alfred C. Oliver, jr., chaplain of Walter Reed Hospital, officiating.

A. W. Griffith To Wed in April

An engagement of interest to Washington is that of Miss Virginia Phillips Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robbins, of Middletown, Ohio, to Mr. Arthur Walker Griffith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Frances Roelfsen Griffith, of Norfolk and Washington. The announcement was made at a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robbins in their home in Middletown Saturday.

Miss Robbins is a granddaughter of the late Sabin Robbins, pioneer paper manufacturer of the Miami Valley, and of Mrs. Sarah Virginia Robbins, whose name she bears. She attended the Hillsdale School for Girls in Cincinnati and Rosemary Hall in Greenwich, Conn. She is an active member of the Ohio Junior League.

Mr. Griffith is a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute and later took post-graduate work at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

No definite date has been selected for the wedding, which will take place some time in April.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Advice and Encouragement Asked by Wife Whose Husband Is Quarrelsome and Threatening.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a comfortable home and two nice boys and a girl in their early teens. My problem is my husband, who, although he is most industrious and hardworking, makes our home a kind of purgatory with temperament let loose, with threats and curses when he does not have his own way. I might say that he rules as a complete dictator.

* * * *

I think he would be pleased to have me leave him. But he insists in any case that he will keep the children. He defies me to try to get their custody. I dread putting this to the test, as he will go to any lengths to gain his own way. I realize he is almost a dual personality; pleasant sometimes, ugly at other times.

* * * *

Perhaps you have heard of similar domestic situations and can write something which will enlighten me, or at least give me courage. When in his worst moods he threatens me with separation from the children. I have to give in to him in everything. The upheavals are emotionally so enervating if I try to assert any rights.

Won't you write a few lines in answer to this, as soon as you can? Thanking you, I am most gratefully yours, UNHAPPY WIFE.

Bullies Are Cowards.

DEAR UNHAPPY WIFE: A bully is a coward at heart and a brute on the surface. Your husband is obviously a bully and a coward, and when his bluffing is challenged probably resorts to brutal tactics. That is why it is so difficult for you to deal with him. He may not inflict physical violence on you or the children, but he well knows that his verbal assaults on your nervous systems are equally destroying. But you can dismiss all fear that he could, or would, ever take the children from you. After all, the children's preference in the matter would count for much; and it is safe to assume that they would rally to their mother, rather than elect to live with a tyrannical father, if the time should come that the family divides.

* * * *

I believe a complete change in mental attitude on your part might help the situation considerably. He probably reasons that he has you completely intimidated. Never let him feel convinced of that. You can adopt one of two attitudes. You can make it clear that you give in to him not because you are afraid of him, but because you prefer peace to privilege, and that this is a deliberate intellectual choice; or you can take the attitude that the worm has turned at last, and that you have decided to come out into the open and fight to the bitter finish—cost you what it may—to determine your intrinsic human rights in this relationship.

* * * *

In the event you decide on the latter course, take the children into your confidence and tell them why you have so decided. Tell them you love them better than your life, but that in bucking their father's tyranny, as you propose to do, you are launching a bold fight for a more decent and tolerable existence for all of you. Tell them you have no faintest idea of deserting them or of leaving them to him, and that all you ask of them is to trust to your love and courage to find the right way out. Tell them to stand by you and you will never desert them. If you four can unite in mutual, loving confidence in a stand for fair treatment for all, you may win much ground—and certainly you won't lose any.

* * * *

Then, the next time he challenges your right to exercise a minimum of free choice or free action in a given instance, hold stubbornly to your pre-determined course and let him rave. If he finds blustering and swearing of no avail, he may draw in his horns a bit. Don't make a martyr of yourself on the theory that the neighbors mustn't know about the situation. Truth has a way of permeating the public consciousness. Your neighbors probably already know all about your domestic set-up, and if you are in the right and your husband in the wrong, their sympathy is undoubtedly with you and the children.

The most affirmative thought that I can give you is never to be intimidated by a coward; and always to have the courage to do what you believe to be the best thing to do.

M. H.

Disillusioned in Love.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married woman with one child. I am not living with my husband. About two weeks ago I met a very nice young man, who has since been to see me several times. I have fallen very much in love with him. He has been in love with another girl who gave him up for no reason at all, according to his story. She just told him she didn't care to commit herself to any one man.

* * * *

As a result, he has no confidence in women any more. He just sees life in terms of taking one woman out tonight and another one out the next night and so on. He says I am a nice girl and he likes me very much, but that he just can't take me seriously. I don't know how to treat a man who says he doesn't care for your company but still acts as if he likes you a little.

* * * *

This man has told me he likes me better than any other girls in this town that he has gone out with. Please tell me just how to treat him and how to feel toward him.

WORRIED MARIE.

* * * *

DEAR MARIE: Treat the young man with amused indifference. Don't take him any more seriously than he professes to take you. The way to feel about him is that he isn't worth giving a second thought to, for he really isn't, so far as you are concerned. After all, he has only himself to blame for having picked the wrong person to love in the first place, and he is acting like a cry-baby in wearing his hurt on his sleeve. Take the attitude of "Who cares whether your heart's been broken? Do you imagine you are the first and only man who's been disappointed in love?" If he says he doesn't care for your company, don't demean yourself by lapping up small crumbs of his attention. Tell him to mend his manners or find somebody else's shoulders to cry on. M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I SUPPOSE there's nothing wrong with a red brick mantel," said the lady who lives in the corner house. "But I don't like mine a bit. I'm making a few changes in my living room but it's out of the question to think of tearing the mantel out. However, I wondered if there's any way of making it look different.

"My main grievance is that brick color, because my heart is set on doing the room over in colors that won't do at all with the mantel. So if there's no way to change it, I'll have to revamp my color plans. I'd like to have the walls done in powder blue, then have the sofa in plum color, two easy chairs in old gold, one other chair in a flowered material on a plum ground, then droperies and curtains in old gold. The rug I have is blue and I'm planning to keep that. I can get two new lamps and thought I'd add some new accessories such as ash trays, vases and cigarette boxes. What would you suggest for them?"

There is one thing to do about a brick mantel . . . and that is to paint it. The best way is to give it a coat of shellac first so that the paint won't soak into the brick, this is in case you later want to take the paint off and have it natural brick color again. However, it's wise to consult a high grade painter about a job like this, it has to be done right. We'd have it white in the room you describe.

But in case you find that it isn't practical to do the fireplace over after all, you might use deep coral in place of plum in your color scheme, then we think the brick color would be quite all right in present taste.

As for lamps and accessories, we'd have these all in white and brass as much as possible. Repeat the glint of gold again in picture frames.

New Soybean Food Recipe Likely Soon

ACCORDING to recent publication, Miss Sybil Woodruff, of the University of Illinois foods laboratory, has recently created the title of chief soybean taster for herself.

Miss Woodruff's sense of taste may determine your like or dislike for soybeans. She decides which varieties of the beans are the most palatable and which are less appealing.

This chief in foods in the department of home economics at the university has, with the aid of her assistants, tasted 275 varieties of soybeans. According to Miss Woodruff, only six varieties have been palatable and of pleasing appearance after cooking.

Miss Woodruff has already made recipes for "Casserole of Hokkaido Soybeans" and "Jogun Soybean Perfection Salad," which you may soon see on your menus.

Miss Woodruff started her experimenting with soybeans three years ago. Many kinds have been eliminated by this time.

The tasting season starts late in August and lasts for a month. This is while the pods and beans are green. They may be hulled and cooked in salt water and serve like green peas or lima beans. The nutritive value is due to its high percentage of proteins and high calorie value in addition to certain vitamins, says Miss Woodruff.

The dry beans are being used in the form of flour.

You may have eaten bread containing a portion of soybean flour since bakers are using up to 15 per cent of this flour in combination with wheat flour. It seems to produce a better crust and make a superior toast.

List for Lunch Box Suggestions Of School Children Is Proposed

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WHAT to put into the daily lunch which the children carry to school is an ever-repeating problem. Perhaps a little organization would be of help.

First, for the equipment. A special drawer in which are kept all the paraphernalia of preparation, and the corner of a table or dresser-shelf or even a small table reserved for putting up the meal are helpful.

In the drawer can be placed wax paper, toothpicks, brown paper and string if there is no lunch box; a knife for cutting bread, another for spreading butter, etc. There should be a small vacuum bottle for each child.

In the drawer, or pinned on the wall nearby, there should be an ever-growing list of foods suitable for lunch boxes. Mother and children can all make additions to this list.

Every lunch should contain, besides the basic bread and butter which supply bulk and starch, a certain proportion of proteins in the form of meat, eggs, or cheese and a generous amount of fruit and greens. Some milk should always be supplied, either in the vacuum bottle or in the form of a cup custard or milk pudding easily carried in a tiny baking dish with waxed paper fastened over it by means of an elastic band. In hot weather the bottle can be filled with a cold but nourishing drink

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 10.

THIS is the day that the strange creature who also inhabits my house, and has for quite some time, walks about the living-room muttering to himself in strange tongues. For this was the day that "The Great War" thundered, shuddered and was suddenly still.

ALICE HUGHES.

In his calmer moments, each year, he recalls to me what he considers the greatest of all "war cartoons." It was published in the old magazine called "Life" some years ago. A young man and a young woman were lying under a flowering tree and the young man said dreamily, to the young woman, "Just think! Ten years ago today the war ended!" And the young woman, looking skyward, replied, "What war?"

This has always seemed, to my odd fellow-traveler, the ultimate word on the matter. That done, he resumes his solemn hiking from the big red chair to the radio, and return. His only other intelligible comment on Armistice Day, as the phone is ringing eight times in five minutes, and messenger boys are hurling new beauty products in at the front door, is to stop and say bitterly, "Oh, for the peace of my messy straw pile in that little windowless shack on the Scheldt!" And, as he hikes on, I try to understand.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mrs. Byron Foy, the Thelma Chrysler that was, seems dogged this year by the worst sartorial luck in history. For the second time in a very few weeks she has met the duplicate of her gown right plumb in the middle of a party! The second edition occurred at the Colony Restaurant party thrown by Doris Duke Cromwell, and her gown-mate was the Countess Dorothy di Frasso, who made Hollywood social-conscious. I watched them both bridle prettily and then decide to snicker it off in a most refined and genteel way. Neither went home to change, and a fine time seemed to be had by all. This appears to be the "social poise" we read about in the costly magazines . . . Doris, by the way, wore one of these white Vionnet's that seem positively to float. . .

* * * *

But the belle of the town, and I bar neither Priscy St. George nor Honey Johnson, is now seen to be Eleanor Young, who caused Newport's dowagers to drop their lorgnettes, last summer. With a pair of bluebirds in her hair, she floats about in a crowd of young rakes in tails, and without a doubt is the fall's leading captivator . . . As for the most popular member of the cafe crowd of the moment, Libby Holman takes the palm without a struggle. This unfortunate girl, who had such grief through her marriage to young Reynolds, with its subsequent tragedy, is now prettier than she has ever been, and is the prime adornment of "21," the restaurant behind the iron grill. One of the oddest tales of great wealth I've heard in months concerns Libby. She is said to have appeared at "21" wearing a mink coat, and to have changed to ermine right then and there in the shank of the evening.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Feeling Low? Look to Thyroid.

There is no simple, easy formula that may be used to explain the many varieties of nervousness, and this discussion is designed to call attention to the rather common occurrence of "nerve" symptoms, even mental disturbances, following failure of the thyroid gland to perform satisfactorily.

We have all seen instances among our friends of alert, up-and-coming men and women who gradually changed into fat, logy and indifferent persons. They may have complained that they tired easily, exhibited numerous aches and pains, had difficulty in concentrating upon any task of importance, and were unable to make decisions. There was a rather steady loss of memory and a listlessness that was unexplainable when one though back a year or so and compared—in retrospect—their aforetime energy.

Symptoms Varied.

Other individuals show marked excitement at periods, interspersed with intervals of apathy and mental confusion. Occasionally they may require forcible control. Along with the mental unrest there may come certain fixed ideas or resentments toward members of the family. These may fade away at times, when the patient will resume his former somnolence.

The case is reported of a 28-year-old woman on whom a diagnosis of a psychosis had been made. Some months prior to the examination she had noticed that her strength and vitality were diminishing. She was very sensitive to cold and her memory began to fail. Symptoms of melancholia were present now and then. She had increased in weight with noticeable enlargement of the hands and feet, and it had been necessary twice to purchase shoes of larger size.

Examination by a skilled psychiatrist revealed a person who, except for her previous history, would have been considered subnormal mentally. Further investigation disclosed the low state of metabolism, pointing to a failure on the part of the thyroid. With appropriate medication soon there was no trace of her chilly feelings, her mental reactions became quicker, and she lost 4 pounds in weight within ten days. In the same period the metabolic rate rose from a minus 37 to a minus 21. Within another few weeks all symptoms of mental depression were completely eliminated and her appearance became that of an alert, wide-awake woman.

Dosage Difficult to Fix.

Physicians have learned that it is exceedingly difficult to fix a dose of thyroid gland substance that will apply to all individuals. Before attempting medication the patient and his thyroid demands must be studied. Most physicians will use a very small quantity at the outset, administered once or twice daily. If no unfavorable symptoms appear after two weeks the amount may be increased gradually to the limit of tolerance. There is danger of upsetting the metabolism by too generous doses of this powerful material. Nervousness, excitability and excessive perspiration, with feelings of heat, palpitation and breathlessness may develop because too much of this gland extract is absorbed.

'Inner Personality,' Best Style Guide For Women, Says Gertrude Lawrence

Actress Noted for Chic Also Advises Use of Dark Colors.

By Ethel Ehlen,

"DRESS, but don't dress up," advises Gertrude Lawrence, noted English actress, who is also acclaimed as one of the best-dressed women of the stage. Women, commented Miss Lawrence, don't give enough thought to the background they are to be a part of when planning their attire. If they are to dine in a large room, not too gaily decorated, then bright clothes will be harmonious. On the other hand, if the background is to be gay and colorful, then choose black, or another dark shade.

Miss Lawrence called forth this advice from the bath tub in her suite in the Wardman Park Hotel, preparatory to attending a luncheon at the French Embassy. Later, she appeared in a chic dark-brown woolen suit (one-piece frock and a short jacket) topped by a brown high-crowned felt hat whose height was accented by a long, brown feather. Her leather shoes, gloves and handbag were a lighter, reddish brown, and the velvet scarf at her throat was rust color.

Personality and not height or weight should be the determining factor when choosing a wardrobe, believes Miss Lawrence. "It is really an attitude rather than stature which is paramount in successful grooming," she said. Being small herself, she dresses with much the same procedure as a tall person, because she has a "tall personality." Straight lines stressing simplicity and sophistication are always selected by her, whether her costume happens to be formal evening or country tweeds. It is not only because she thinks these are smartest, but she believes they are the best expression for her own personality.

Dark Colors Advised.

"Bright colors detract from any woman's face," volunteered this fashion authority. "A clever woman will select clothes of a dark or subdued tone and brighten them with accessories. I often wear plaid gloves as the only brilliant touch for a dark suit."

There is nothing smarter than black, Miss Lawrence averred—black unadorned, and a woman who decks herself out in a lot of jewelry, according to this noted actress's standards, looks like "a huge chandelier."

For the stage, noted designers create Miss Lawrence's clothes, but for her private life wardrobe, she loves to go shopping and select things at random. It makes for interesting variety and more fun in making purchases, she believes. She also loves to shop for men's apparel, such as ties, socks and gloves, and thinks that men could be more helpful in assisting women to select their clothes, because they have good style and color sense. She laments that they are so shy and timid and pretend to loathe such expeditions.

"Glamour," that mysterious something women are always seeking to define—and attain—is not a matter of clothes or clever dress, Miss Lawrence believes. "Too many women think it means long eyelashes, red finger nails and exotic clothes," she said, "when in reality it is personality—being yourself. In other words, putting your companion at ease by being agreeable, entertaining and sympathetic."

Glamour and a lot of make-up are certainly not synonymous, maintains Miss Lawrence. She is an ideal exponent of her own ideas on that subject. She prefers a light powder which permits the texture of the skin to show through, quite a lot of bright lipstick and just a suggestion of eye-shadow. There is no apparent trace of rouge.

The "Ideal Man."

A man, Miss Lawrence believes, notices a woman's face first and then the general style picture. Many women, especially housewives, she says, are ashamed to be chic, thinking it takes too much time away from their home-making or care of the children, when, in reality, they owe it to themselves. "If mothers took the time to make themselves more attractive perhaps the baby wouldn't cry so much," she laughingly exclaimed. In answer to the inevitable inquiry, "Do women dress to please themselves or men?" Miss Lawrence answered, "Both. But if they are fastidious they should consider it a duty to themselves," she added.

Her "ideal man" Miss Lawrence defines as "one that treats a woman as a woman, not as a child or another man; one interested in his job, also music and books and inclined to outdoor sports." She said he could be a politician, doctor, newspaper or business man, but not of the theater, as she tires of "talking shop" off the stage. "It has been said too much that American men spoil women by too much attention—I like to be spoiled by such attention; it makes one more womanly, less wise and worldly. Men should pay more attention than they do to such trivial things as sending flowers before taking a girl to dinner and the theater, and then following it up the next day with more flowers, accompanying each flower gift by a clever flattering note."

While Miss Lawrence is noted for her smart evening and street clothes, she says, she is more comfortable in country tweeds, low heels and hatless than anything else. In fact, she explained, "I have become so accustomed to going about London during the daytime without a hat, I have almost forgotten how to wear one and usually find myself in America walking down the street with my hat under my arm." Miss Lawrence is intensely fond of the country—she has a farm in England and has been shopping in New England for maple furniture and hooked rugs and purchased some candlewick spreads in Washington for her house.

Mrs. Honeyman Direct Exponent Of Democracy

New Woman Member of Congress Believes in Personal Contact.

By Malvina Lindsay.

A "LITERAL DEMOCRAT" might be one way of describing Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, of Oregon, who will present the only new feminine face in Congress this session. One of her outstanding characteristics is the ability to get next to the man in the factory and the woman in the kitchen and find out what they are thinking and saying.

Now that Mrs. Honeyman will make the fifth member of the women's contingent in Congress, residents of Washington who met her on her trip East last summer are exchanging reminiscences of her. They all agree that she is singularly free from any "stuffed shirt" attitudes. She laughs easily and has a quick sense of humor. "Why should I waste time telling a weary audience from a platform how good I am?" she said here when asked about her method of campaign. "That sort of thing doesn't get votes. When I meet the voter in the home we can talk things over and iron out our differences."

Roosevelt Bridesmaid.

Mrs. Honeyman, a girlhood friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and a fellow bridesmaid with her at the wedding of Helen Roosevelt, the President's half-niece, has much the same ideas as the First Lady about appearing in unexpected places and meeting people directly. Throughout her political campaigning she spurned not only the heavy speeches but the formal teas. She went to factories and industrial plants at the noon hours and talked to millhands and other laborers and she made personal canvasses among the housewives.

During her primary campaign she went up and down city blocks ringing doorbells and asking women and men their political views. She particularly concentrated on the personal method of campaign in the districts in which she was weakest. By finding out why voters were against her she was better able to answer their arguments and broaden her own viewpoint, she felt. This ability to listen to what the other fellow says and try to see his side of things has always characterized Mrs. Honeyman, her friends say.

Mrs. Honeyman originated her personal canvass method campaign when she was winning her way into the Oregon Legislature. She is still a firm believer in it, despite the popularity of radio and mass meetings.

Should Meet Voters.

"Don't ever think that the day of personal campaigning is past," she said on her recent visit here. "Voters want to know who is representing them. And women running for office can overcome much masculine prejudices by meeting the men voters face to face."

Like Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Representative from New York, and another personal friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Honeyman, is expected to be keenly interested in social legislation in the next Congress.

As to personal statistics, Mrs. Honeyman is 55 years old, a grandmother, and likes to cook. Her husband, David T. Honeyman, is secretary-treasurer of the Honeyman Hardware Co., of Portland.

Nuts Appear in New Guises Among Prize-Winning Recipes

First Award for Nut Mince Goes to Virginian; Delicacy Appears in Rolls and Dumplings As Well As in Desserts.

NUTS SEEM to be a popular constituent food as well as delicacy and they well deserve the popularity that they have for they are both nutritional and appetizing and may be used in many ways.

In last week's nut recipe contest, Mrs. J. H. French, of Lincoln, Va., won the first prize of $3 for her recipe for nut mince.

The second prize of $2 was awarded to Samuel Gordon, 1331 Maryland avenue northeast, for almond rolls. The recipe for pecan dumplings, submitted by Mrs. E. Smith, 2909 O street northwest, received the third prize of $1.

The fourth prize of $1 was won by Marie E. Moran, 2616 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, for her recipe for nutty bonne bouches, and the fifth prize of $1 was won by Mrs. B. P. Hessler, of 218 S street northeast, for her recipe for pistachio bisque.

Mrs. French's recipe follows:

Nut Mince.

½ pound of any kind of nuts, or mixed nuts
6 ounces of dry breadcrumbs
1 grated onion
1 tablespoon of mushroom ketchup
About ¾ pint of vegetable stock
1 ounce butter, pepper and salt, mashed potatoes and coutons of bread

Melt butter in a frying pan and fry the nuts, (which should have been forced through the food chopper), bread crumbs and onion a pale brown, then add ketchup, seasoning and sufficient stock and cook a few minutes. Make a border with the potato on a hot dish, put in the mince and garnish with coutons of bread.

Mr. Gordon's recipe:

Almond Rolls.

2 cups scalded milk
¼ cup melted butter
¼ cup lard
1½ yeast cakes
2 cups flour
¼ cup lukewarm water
3 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped, blanched almonds
2 teaspoons almond extract
¾ cup sugar

Scald milk. Add melted butter, lard and sugar. When lukewarm add dissolved yeast cakes and extract. Stir in two cups flour and add three well-beaten eggs. Cover, let rise until light. Cut down, add chopped almonds and enough flour to mix light dough (four or five cups). Cover, let rise again. When double in bulk, turn on floured board and shape into round buns. Put in greased pan, close together. Cover and let rise. Bake in oven 375 F. for 20 or 25 minutes. When done brush over tops with frosting made with confectionery sugar mixed with boiling water and flavored with vanilla. Sprinkle chopped, salted, browned almonds on top.

Here is Mrs. Smith's recipe:

Pecan Dumplings.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
½ cup coarsely chopped pecan nuts
¾ cup milk

Sift flour, measure, and sift again with baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening very fine, add nuts, add milk all at once, and mix only enough to moisten flour. Drop by tablespoonfuls on gently boiling chicken or veal stew. Cover tightly, boil gently but steadily 12 to 15 minutes without removing the cover. Serve immediately on hot platter around stew. Makes 12 medium sized dumplings.

Marie Moran's recipe follows:

Nutty Bonne Bouches.

2 squares bitter chocolate
½ cup butter
3 eggs
1 cup sugar
¾ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup mixed nuts, chopped
¼ teaspoon almond extract

Melt butter and chocolate in double boiler until blended. Beat eggs light, add sugar, the flour sifted with the salt and baking powder, add chocolate mixture. Mix well, stir well, beat. Add flavoring and nuts. Bake in two greased layer pans in 350 F. oven for 20 minutes. Cut in small blocks at once.

Film Star Emphasizes Smart Afternoon Frocks

For "Don't Dress" evenings and "Do Dress" afternoons Marian Marsh has a special set of dresses. They are all street length. Her favorite is black moire, made with short puffed sleeves, swing skirt and large jewelled clip. According to Marion these are the most important dresses in a girl's wardrobe because she always feels dressed up in them, but never too much so.

Pat O'Brien Favors Lobster Spread Canapes

It's a game in Hollywood to see who can present the snappiest hors d'oevres or canapes before the dinner gong summons one to really substantial food.

Manlike, Pat O'Brien likes lobster spread on bits of toasted white bread. The spread is made by combining six ounces of minced lobster with one teaspoon lemon juice, 1½ teaspoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon garlic flavored French dressing.

Apron With Butterfly Pocket Suggested to Knitters as Gift

The Flowers 'Grow' Rapidly in Lazy Daisy and Outline Stitch—Colorful Fabric of Yoke and Flounce —Ideal for Bazaar.

Pattern 5729.

By Alice Brooks.

A DREAM of dainty charm—this practical "Butterfly" apron. Give it as a gift and the recipient will applaud your cleverness and originality. Donate it to the Christmas bazaar and watch its selling appeal! The colorful fabric of yoke and flounce is repeated in the decorative butterflies of applique, one of which forms the pocket. The flowers "grow" rapidly in lazy daisy and outline stitch. One yard would make the apron all of one material; ¾ yard of the body material and ½ yard of contrasting material. Make it as shown. In pattern 5729 you will find a transfer pattern of the apron with the motif 11¾ x 12 inches correctly placed and applique pattern pieces; color suggestions; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used; directions for making the apron.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Silk Restoring Hint.

It is possible to put back life into a silk dress after it has been dyed or washed. Soak one or two tablespoons or granulated gelatin in a small amount of cold water, then add two cups of boiling water. When the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved add a gallon of water. Then rinse the dress in this solution, and iron on the wrong side when almost dry.

GUARANTEED RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Pills and drugs give only temporary relief. The sensible thing to do is to put "bulk" back into your meals.

Millions of people get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Its "bulk" is much like that in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Some years ago, an investigation was made among thousands of ALL-BRAN users. 98 per cent found it satisfactory. Only 2 per cent had the type of constipation that would not respond to ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as cereal or in cooked dishes. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Hopping John is Magical, Dainty and Easy to Make

By Elizabeth E. Poe.

BRAVE INDEED would be the native South Carolinian who would dare the fates on New Year's Eve by not partaking of Hopping John, the State's most distinctive dish.

Hopping John is supposed to have a magic power to produce good fortune for the New Year if one eats it on the last day of the old. Of course, this is a superstition, originating, no doubt, with the colored and taught to young citizens by mammies with much embellishment until it has become one of the cherished customs of all.

It is a simple enough dish to possess such potency. While eaten by all, high, low, rich and poor, it is easy to obtain and easy to cook.

The cow peas which flourish in this State or black beans are used for its particular ingredients.

Hopping John.

2 cups cow peas (or black beans)
1 cup uncooked rice
3 cups of water in which peas were cooked
3 tablespoons bacon drippings
Salt to taste

Boil peas until they are tender. Add the bacon drippings and rice, and 3 cups water to steam the rice. Cook over a slow fire for 1 hour.

The waters that bound South Carolina and make her a seafaring State have a largesse of piscatory treasures that have made fish and its brothers a large element in the food life of the State. Nowhere are there more delicious shrimp. They are large and delicious and a flavor indescribable to the mere outsider who lives in another State. There are many ways in which Carolina cooks prepare shrimp, but none is more characteristic of the State than shrimp pilau.

With that delicacy as the main dish the rest of the meal, no matter how appetizing, is simply a work of supererogation.

Baked Whiting.

Make incisions in both sides of the fish and season. Butter the bottom of a baking dish, sprinkle over with finely chopped onions and mushrooms, and on this bottom range the fish, pressing them down firmly. Cover over with more chopped onions and mushrooms and sprinkle with bread crumbs; pour melted butter over and cook in a moderate oven, basting at times. Then take out the dish, put a reduction of white wine in the bottom and serve, squeeze over the fish the juice of a lemon, sprinkle parsley over the top, and serve in the dish in which fish were cooked.

From early in the spring when okra first appears in the markets of South Carolina, the people of that State enjoy a profusion of okra soup, a whole meal in itself, containing as it does chicken and ham and other dainties. Indeed, in many of the more humble homes it is a meal and all are content with it alone, especially when accompanied by toothsome corn pone. The method of preparing it given here is by Mrs. Thomas S. McMillan, wife of Representative McMillan, of South Carolina, and sent by her to the Congressional Cook Book.

Okra Soup.

3 quarts prepared beef stock, unstrained
1 large can tomatoes
2 cupfuls okra, sliced across the pod
2 cupfuls corn cut from cob
Chicken and ham to taste

Cook all together for 45 minutes; season to taste. Green pepper chopped into this soup, when served, adds a delicious flavor.

Any discussion of South Carolina cooking would have a lack for the native son if it failed to mention "red rice," in which this product of Carolina rice fields is used to best advantage.

Red Rice.

Half pound bacon
1 small onion
1 cup tomatoes
2 cups cooked rice.

Cut the bacon in small pieces and fry. Remove from the skillet and brown the minced onion in the bacon fat. Add the tomatoes and cooked rice. Blend well and serve.

Empire Styles Call for Firm, Rounded Lines

Symmetrical Contours Are Developed by Series of Exercises.

By Carolyn Abbott.

THE 1936 FALL season is an empire season bringing glamour with the lovely brocades that go with the period.

There are low, often unrelieved, square-cut necklines on evening gowns and with high waistlines. These details call for symmetrical rounded contours, and shoulders that don't show hollows resembling the Grand Canyon below the shoulder blades.

The bust is one of the most difficult places to reduce or enlarge. About the only safe way to reduce the bust by diet and exercise is in a general program planned for the entire body. This will also fatten a thin pair of shoulders.

Any exercises which involve stretching the arms upward or sideways makes those adjacent chest muscles work. You can help firm a flabby bust, and accentuate, if not increase the size of a thin one, by simply taking a deep breath and forcing the bust outward as you exhale. Do this regularly and often. Here is a good exercise to develop the muscles of the upper back, stretch neck muscles, and get directly at those of the chest and bust. This should be done ten times with a rest between each five times.

Lying flat on the back on the floor or rug, stretch both arms straight out at the sides. Keeping them flat on the rug, palms down throughout the exercise, raise the chest and shoulders with chin tilted upward resting the weight rather high on the back of the head. Relax and lower the chest and shoulders to the rug.

Proper exercise is an excellent way to reduce, but for good results, all reducing routines should be done slowly and the types of exercises in which you stretch your body upward and backward are better than forward-bending ones.

Hold your body erect with hands high above the head, then stretch and bend backward as far as possible. This stretches the waist-line muscles, elevates the chest and helps to reduce a double chin.

If you want to make your hips slimmer, do rolling exercises, and do them slowly, pressing your body on the floor with feet together, roll back and forth 20 times. Go back to the original position, then, crossing left leg over right, force it upward until it is perpendicular with your body, keeping the right leg perfectly straight. This slenderizes hips and waistline and stretches lag muscles.

To have beautiful shoulders to show off your best gowns, you must do more than exercise them for the correct lines. You must take care that your back and shoulders are kept clean and free from blemishes and freckles. Blotchy skin on your back is just as bad as on your face.

When you are sure that your back and shoulders are scrubbed clean, rub a good lotion into the skin to make it soft then lightly but evenly dust over them with powder. Remove the excess powder with a soft brush as you would from your face.

Cranberry Recipe May Win Award In Prize Contest

Cranberries not only add color to a meal but also a desirable spicy taste. Of course they may be used in sauce but there are so many other uses for them that many of us do not know of as in muffins, pudding, relish, salads and mince meats. These new ideas might add a little variety to the Thanksgiving dinner.

If you have an unusual recipe for cranberries, why not copy it neatly and send it to the Foods Editor of The Washington Post so that she will receive it not later than Saturday morning. Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant. Be sure to write your name and address clearly.

The cash prizes to be awarded this week are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes. You may be one of the winners so get busy now.

Civic Leaders Cite Accuracy Of Gallup Poll

Post Wins Commendation for Furnishing Public With Mirror of Times.

Commendations on the accuracy of the Gallup poll in forecasting results of the Presidential election continue to pour into The Washington Post from public officials and civic leaders.

The scientific sampling method employed by the Gallup poll enabled The Post to show in advance of the election the proportions which the Democratic landslide assumed.

Among the expressions of commendation voiced yesterday were the following:

HAROLD L. ICKES, Secretary of the Interior: "I had not familiarized myself with the Gallup method of conducting a poll, but as the recent campaign developed it was clear to me that he was not only making an honest and objective attempt to ascertain what the sentiment of the people was but that, more nearly than anyone else who was canvassing the situation nationally, he reflected the real sentiment of the voters."

DR. FRANK W. BALLOU, Superintendent of Schools: "I am a regular reader of The Washington Post and have watched with much interest Dr. Gallup's measurement of public opinion on current questions in our political life. The accuracy with which Dr. Gallup predicted the results of the election held last Tuesday should be an endorsement of his methods and an encouragement to him to continue his work along this line and perfect his methods through a continued study of the accuracy of his predictions. I commend The Washington Post for having furnished the people in Washington with Dr. Gallup's material, and I trust that The Post will continue to favor its readers with the results of Dr. Gallup's work."

ISADOR LUBIN, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor: "Regarding the Gallup poll, the growing consciousness of the American citizens as evidenced by the large increase in the number of votes cast in the Presidential election makes it more essential than ever that in measuring public opinion every economic group in the Nation be sampled. The Gallup method which attempts to reach all groups, is a real contribution to scientific polling. The Washington Post is to be congratulated upon its foresight in being one of the first papers in the United States to carry the Gallup poll. This is but one of the many evidences of the growing public usefulness of The Post."

HARLLEE BRANCH, Second Assistant Postmaster General: "I have been very much interested in the Gallup polls, particularly in the method employed for measuring popular sentiment. Naturally, there was a question in my mind as to whether the comparatively small number of ballots and interviews could be considered a fair and reasonable barometer. The result of the election seems to have vindicated the Gallup method and to have discredited some of the heretofore traditional, or orthodox, method of polling public sentiment."

F. M. RUSSELL, Vice President, National Broadcasting Co.: "Dr. Gallup's method of gauging public opinion has demonstrated its soundness and he is to be congratulated for devising the system. The Post should also be commended for making this poll available in Washington."

P. W. BUDWORTH, Branch Manager, Frigidaire Corporation, for the District of Columbia: "Dr. Gallup again is true to form. His scientific method of analysis of public opinion and sentiment of the American people removes the guess from guesswork. Your organization is to be commended on securing the services for Dr. Gallup."

MRS. GEORGE MADDEN GRIMES, Former State Regent, D. A. R.: "As an admirer of The Washington Post, I have been particularly interested during the past months in following Dr. Gallup's poll on public issues. The results of his forecast in the Presidential election confirm that his method of sampling public opinion is productive of reasonable accuracy and therefore offers to readers an interesting guide to future social and economic trends. Undoubtedly the experience obtained from the past election will permit further perfecting of the sampling method employed."

Land Stresses Need Of Ship Test Basin

Lack of a modern test basin here is forcing American shipbuilders to have some of their work done abroad, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair of the Navy Department, asserted yesterday as his annual report was made public.

The model test basin at the Navy Yard has for some time been considered obsolete and unsuited for experimental work.

In a plea for funds for an adequate test basin here, Admiral Land said "It is definitely known that American shipbuilders are going abroad for some of their model basin work. This is due, in part at least, to the inadequate facilities of our own model basin and is a condition of such serious importance as to require immediate correction by building a new basin."

Wife, Sisters to Share Admiral Sims' Estate

Newport, R. I., Nov. 10 (AP).—The estate of the late Admiral William S. Sims is to be divided among members of his family by the terms of his will filed for probate here today.

Two sisters, Louisa and Mary, both of Haverford, Pa., are to receive life incomes and on their death the residue will revert to his widow, Mrs. Ann Hitchcock Sims, and on her death to his five children.

Rare Ensko Silver Collection Displayed by Mrs. Crawford

By Sibilla Skidelsky.

An opportunity is offered to lovers of authentic antique silver in Washington. Mrs. Edna Crawford Johnson is holding this week, throughout Saturday, a unique display of silver pieces belonging to the collection of Robert Ensko, New York City.

Many among these pieces have been displayed in the leading museums of this country. Some will soon belong to their permanent collections.

Mrs. Johnson has always had, in her private collection as well as among the things offered for sale, in ordinary time, silver of exquisite taste and selection. It is therefore quite appropriate that this show, which is uncommercial, should be held at her residence. The initiative was hers; her aim in arranging the exhibition is to acquaint the Washington public with authentic, real antique English and early-American silverware, not copies; to thus propagate among us understanding for this old and yet so vital craft.

Silver-making, though an old and honored tradition, is very much alive today; the history of its making, the evolution of its manifold styles is indispensable to know if one wants to select with discrimination pieces purchased later for one's own use, whether those be equally authentic examples, good copies, or even modern designs.

The display held now at Mrs. Crawford Johnsson's residence was selected by Robert Ensko, one of the leading silver experts, from his collection of antiques. It contains no reproductions.

There is a hotwater kettle from Paul Lannerie, catalogued by Alfred Jones as representative of Lannerie at his very best. Exhibited at the Yale Fine Arts Gallery, this hotwater kettle is a very valuable and interesting examples of eighteenth century silverware, though it does appear extremely surcharged and over-elaborate in design to our modern vision. We are now accustomed to lineary simplicity, and it dates from 1751, an epoch complicated in design to the extreme.

Reminiscent of old Dutch pictures is a seventeenth century tankard, reputedly the finest heraldic engraving ever done in this country. Though American-made, its shape is entirely of Dutch inspiration; one involuntarily visualizes the opulent dining rooms of seventeenth century Holland, where stiffly dressed servant maids pass tankards of beer around the groups of men lingering to discuss the topics of the day. It is strangely modern, in a way, in spite of the fine heraldic workmanship which is distinctly of another—and perhaps more artistically refined—era.

Among museum pieces we noticed a pair of exquisite Irish candelabra; a bowl which is the earliest example of silverware ever made in Charleston, S. C.; a snuff-box by Isaac Hutton, of Albany, rare example of early-American craftsmanship which could have belonged to the collection sold not long ago at Christie's in London for $2,000,000. The collection, however, did not contain a single American example, and so the antique snuff-box remained in this country.

Industrial Production Gains in Most Nations

Geneva, Nov. 10 (AP).—Industrial production is rapidly improving in the great majority of countries, Harold Butler, director of the International Labor Office, states in a report made public tonight.

The statement, to be presented to the governing body of the labor organization when it opens its autumn session tomorrow, indicates unemployment is being reduced without any marked rise in prices.

Edith Maxwell Defense Gifts Now Over $400

More Than $1,000 Needed for Retrial in Killing of Her Father.

The Washington Post's defense fund for Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old school teacher, who soon goes on trial a second time for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her father, passed the $400 mark yesterday.

Contributions received were:

Anonymous	$1.00
Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff, Oterville, Mass.	10.00
Total	$11.00
Previously reported	389.28
Total	$400.28

Contributions have come from wherever The Post is read, which means all over the world. Many have come from Virginia, along with letters praying that, in the next trial, the State would undo what was done to Edith in the first trial.

Sentenced to 25 Years.

Readers of The Post first went to Edith's rescue shortly after the first trial. A jury of mountaineers at Wise, Va., had found her guilty of murdering her father with a slipper and Circuit Judge H. A. W. Skeen had sentenced her to 25 years in the penitentiary, athough testimony showed she struck her father with the slipper while he was drunk and beating her.

Since that trial, medical experts have expressed serious doubts that the slipper blow killed Trigg Maxwell. No fracture was found in the skull. Earl Maxwell, brother of Edith, became convinced that Trigg died of a stroke of apoplexy.

The Maxwells were "broke" after the first trial. Edith, taken away from her school teacher job, was in jail. Earl gave up his job to fight for her. The other two Maxwell children were too young to work.

Nearly $1,000 Raised.

Appealing a criminal case costs money. This was supplied by readers of The Post. They raised a fund of nearly $1,000, and Charles Henry Smith, noted criminal lawyer of Alexandria, Va., offered to serve as defense counsel without a fee.

The case was carried to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, which two months ago ordered the first-degree murder verdict, with its 25-year sentence, set aside. The high court said this verdict was not justified by the evidence, and ordered a new trial.

Most of the $1,000 raised by Post readers was exhausted in this fight. A stenographic record of the trial alone cost $300. The gathering of evidence, the traveling expenses of Attorney Smith and those who aided him, the costs of printing and other items accounted for most of the remainder.

Affidavits Gathered.

The same expenses, along with others, must be met in the new trial. Already money has been advanced to meet the cost of gathering affidavits from citizens of Wise County who feel Edith can't hope for a fair trial there.

That is the next step in the fight for justice—an attempt to have the second trial held away from Wise. This question of where the trial is to be held was to have been settled last Saturday, but Judge Skeen, after being reminded by defense attorneys that he was related to the late Trigg Maxwell, disqualified himself.

Gov. George Peery of Virginia now has appointed Judge Ezra T. Carter to preside in the Maxwel case. He will pass on a motion for a change of venue Monday.

Inclosed find ..... as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

Count Ciano Talks With Schuschnigg

Vienna, Nov. 10 (AP).—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy met tonight to discuss questions affecting their countries on the eve of a two-day conference in which Hungary also will join.

An indication that the foreign officials of the three nations will consider Hungary's demand for revision of her boundaries was seen in a statement by Wilhelm Ziegler, Hungarian press chief, that "retention of the status quo means permanent European strife."

Chancellor Schuschnigg's newspaper, Welthlatt, asserted that no sensational moves or surprises would develop at the conference and that "no secret policy will be drawn up."

Passaic Quadruplets Teething, But Healthy

Passaic, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Kasper quadruplets, now 6-month-old healthy children, were teething and trying to creep today.

They are still in St. Mary's Hospital, where they were born, but arrangements are nearly completed for them and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kasper, of Little Ferry, to get a new home.

The quadruplets have grown so rapidly they have been transferred from the nursery to a larger room with new and larger cribs.

Paris Calls Troops, Fears Riots Today

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP).—The government moved 10,000 mobile guard reinforcements into the capital tonight as evidence of the determination to preserve order in the city's streets on Armistice Day.

It sought to prevent political rivals from clashing along the route of tomorrow's ceremonial procession.

Followers of Col. Francois de la Rocque, leader of the Social party, which Communists say is Fascist, and of Jacques Doriot, head of the Popular party which seeks to combine features of communism and fascism, both planned to line the sidewalks of the Champs Elysees.

Although the rightists announced they would be "only spectators" of the Armistice Day parade, leftists charged they planned an anti-government demonstration.

Brussels, Nov. 10 (AP).—The government and the people of little Belgium, historic battleground of European armies, made ready tonight to pause in tribute tomorrow to the country's World War dead. King Leopold, in a simple but solemn ceremony, is scheduled to confer the Fire-Cross on the Unknown Soldier who lies buried at the foot of the Congress Column in the Rue Royale. A civilian parade and a military one are to mark the ceremony.

Statesman in Japan Warns of Dictatorship

Tokyo, Nov. 10 (AP).—Baron Rejirio Wakatsuki, veteran Japanese statesman, warned the country today against trying to set up a dictatorship.

Wakatsuki, forced to resign from the premiership in December, 1931, apparently was replying to the army's attempt to revise the governmental setup.

The army's demands, modified last night because of widespread opposition, would have made members of the Parliamentary assembly ineligible for cabinet posts and would have banned formation of coalition cabinets.

MacDonald Recovers.

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—Former Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, recovered from an attack of indigestion which caused his collapse last night at the Lord Mayor's banquet, was able to take his usual walk today from his Hampstead Heath home.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

You can tell which of us is Wilkens by reason of us being the three standing on the ground. It's me hauling a bottle of our Family's Whiskey out of my coat pocket—then my brother William and then Tom hopping up onto the hay. That's Andy Koozer showing off the string of weenies he's brought. And the old party sitting up front that looks like he's chewing on something—that's Larry Burkes playing away on that old mouth organ he's got. Look at our dog Jessie there—sniffing Andy's weenies. For Parties and Things

...our Family's Whiskey has got what everybody's after!

Being so extra tasty and so specially mild on your throat, it's something grand

I don't know whereabouts you personally are likely to go on Saturdays and holidays and everything—but if you're anyways like us, you kind of itch to get out in the air and have some fun. And I'd just like to say for taking along on parties and things, our Family's Whiskey sure goes over big.

When you're drinking for pleasure, you want something that's got a heap of tastiness to it. And these Autumn days in particular, seeing there's quite a little bite in the wind, your throat wants something extra mild—specially if you get to singing and hollering like you do at some big getogether or other.

In the Wilken Family Whiskey you're going to find out how elegant the personal whiskey of an old family of distilling people tastes. Taking the whole lot of us—Pa Wilken and his Pa and William and Tom and me—we've been busying ourselves with whiskey making for three generations now—learning every scrap there is to learn concerning ways of making extra tasty and extra mild whiskey.

You can just figure what Pa Wilken alone picked up in regards to making good tasting whiskey—him being a distiller 40 years and more. And this is our own Family's Recipe—the exact same as us Wilkens drink amongst ourselves. I'll sure bet when you try it, you'll be real mad you never got to tasting it before now!

Reorganization Outlook.

Whether or not the drastic reorganization and consolidation of Government agencies promised by the Senate Reorganization Committee will materialize in the next Congress, seems likely to hinge on the stand taken by the President.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, chairman of the Senate committee, made clear the other day that the committee does not intend to make its recommendations or seek reorganization legislation on the basis of a "half-baked report." The committee, he said, intends to do a complete job and if necessary already has the legal authority to continue its work through into the 1938 session of Congress.

The Brookings Institute is working feverishly to complete its governmental survey. According to the contract the Institute must report to the committee by December 31. From present indications it would seem that only a partial report will be possible at that date and by the time the survey is completed in every detail and hearings can be held Congress will have been in session some time.

In view of Byrd's feeling that the contemplated reorganization is too important to be done haphazardly or hastily, the probability that the election results will ease the demands for strict economy and the inevitable opposition created by any consolidation scheme, early passage of reorganization legislation would seem unlikely unless the President gets behind it.

Should the President favor giving the various emergency agencies a little more time to see how they will work out, reorganization efforts in the next session of Congress are likely to be confined principally to fact-finding, study, hearings and preliminary recommendations—with legislation put off until 1938.

There are 2,247 persons on the register for Social Security Board administrative officials set up on the basis of the recent examination and from which the staffs of the 56 new regional offices is to be drawn. The board also is planning to hire some personnel employes, principally for service here in Washington, from the new personnel register that has been drawn up and which includes 584 eligibles.

The United States Office of Education is co-operating with the American Library Association in presenting a new series of Monday afternoon radio broadcasts dramatizing literary classics. The True Story Magazine technique is being employed—to give part of the story and the background, building the broadcast up to a climax and then cutting it short with the advice to the listener to read the story.

On Monday the Office of Education put on its first thriller, Edgar Allen Poe's "The Fall of the House of Usher." The sound effects did justice to the eeriness of Poe's tale (and for that matter could have been dubbed into a radio version of Frankenstein or Dracula). There was the pounding of horse's hoofs in the still of the night, the screechings of vultures, the ghostly echoing of voices in the hall, the haunting clanking of the drawbridge, the whir and whistle of the storm, the rapping of an iron knocker on the door and a fair sprinkling of screams.

For 15 minutes the sound effects followed after one another, building up to the breathless heart-pounding climax where Usher screams to Madeleine, "Don't, don't, don't open that door!"

"If you want a thrill go to your public library."

The Federal Architect reports that propped up on the file case in a certain Government office is the following—and we hope, entirely unnecessary—warning:

"It is requested that individuals using contract drawings from the files be returned to the file instead of being placed on top of the case."

Weather Records.

Archivist R. D. W. Connor is in the habit of insisting to his friends that the material stored in the National Archives is not so much "dead matter," but "very much alive." Proof of this occurred only recently when a Department of Interior Engineer, assisting in the construction of a dam at Austin, Tex., came to the Archives in search of records of precipitation and water-stage levels in the Austin drainage basin during the 1870's and 1880's.

The Archives collection of Weather Bureau records contained quite a bit of information on the subject. Most of it was gotten up in reports from volunteer observers in the regions and collected by the United States Army Signal Corps when it had charge of the Weather Bureau work prior to 1891.

We wonder whether the fact that Boston is the home town of Joseph D. Cooper, editor of the Agriculture Exchange, had anything to do with the selection of that city as the destination for the low-cost tour being sponsored by the Athletic Recreation Association for the Thanksgiving holidays. At any rate, the train fare for the trip is $15.55 for transportation alone and $23.75 for the all-expense three-day tour.

Perspective of Langston Low-Rent Housing Project

Architect's perspective shows how buildings are to be laid out at Langston, PWA's $1,800,000 low-rent housing project in Benning road. The development, consisting of fireproof apartments and row houses, will provide 274 home units for low-income families.

Roosevelt Calls On All to Join Red Cross Rolls

President Issues Appeal to Nation as Drive Gets Under Way.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday urged all American citizens to join the American Red Cross during the roll call which begins today and ends Thanksgiving Day. The statement issued from the White House by Mr. Roosevelt, who also is president of the American Red Cross, follows:

"The American Red Cross is close to the heart of every American. Its emblem symbolizes good will and neighborliness and brotherhood throughout our land. Its purposes spring from the deep seated desires of the people themselves, desires for restored orderly living and well-being wherever disaster and calamity strike.

"All of us are proud of the work which the Red Cross did this year after the spring floods and tornadoes. Urban dwellers and rural dwellers alike felt its ministrations in the areas devastated by wind and water as well as wherever disaster struck home in thirty-nine States.

"The Red Cross program of service in disaster relief, in health work, in behalf of disabled former service men, in leading our children to good citizenship through the junior organization and in all of its work for humanity, reflects the generosity and spirit of helpfulness of our citizens. The greater the Red Cross grows in membership the better this Nation and the world will be. The return of prosperity brings with it an added responsibility on the part of all of us toward our neighbor in distress. We must give in proportion as we have received. When the havoc of storm, flood, accidental injury or war visits men, women or children, this beneficent agency begins immediately its mission to heal, to mend, to replace.

"Again, from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, our people everywhere will have an opportunity to join the Red Cross. By joining, every American has the privilege, through individual membership, of sharing in its great work, both local and national. Membership is an evidence of good citizenship. I urge that all who can do so respond promptly and generously to the annual Red Cross membership roll call.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Prettyman Nominated As Civitan Club's Head

E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, was nominated for president of the Civitan Club of Washington at its meeting in the Mayflower Hotel last night. Election will be held in December.

Other officers nominated were Dr. R. L. Morrison, E. H. Cole, R. L. Wolfe, F. M. Nettleship and W. J. Vaught, for vice president; J. C. Ingram, J. High, Dr. E. E. Merriman, G. H. Markward, A. J. Richards, L. O. Drumwright and J. B. Skinner, directors; the secretary, treasurer, chaplain and sergeant at arms will be appointed by the directors. Ashby L. Leath presided.

Embassy Aides Join in Battle On Apartment

Columbia Heights Citizens Charge Milk Situation Is 'Misrepresented.'

Signatures from representatives of the Polish, Mexican, Spanish and Italian Embassies were obtained last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association in its effort to prevent construction of a 90-foot apartment house at Sixteenth and Fuller streets northwest.

The area in which the apartment would be erected, said George Oakley Totten, leading the fight against its construction, allows for only 60-foot apartments.

A permit for a foundation already has been granted the contractors. The National Capital Park and Planning and Fine Arts Commissions have been asked to lend their aid.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council, addressed the meeting, and said officials and economists of the Department of Agriculture had misrepresented the milk situation when reporting to President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace.

Mrs. Boyle asserted these "misrepresentations" were the cause of the President and the Secretary permitting the 1-cent a quart hike in milk prices here.

A resolution protesting the payment of an extra dividend recently by the Washington Railway & Electric Co., until service is "better" and equipment "improved" was adopted.

Resolutions in favor of an eight-hour shift for firemen and a longer period for illumination of street lamps in the morning hours in interest of safety also were adopted.

Citizens Elect Mrs. Wiley

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley has been elected president of the Kalorama Citizens Association.

Other officers chosen by the group, which met Monday night, included Mrs. Edna L. Johnson, first vice president; Mrs. Julius Lansburgh, second vice president; George W. Hodgkins, treasurer, and Mrs. Wiley and Miss Irene Pistorio, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Neighborhood House Will Honor Director

Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, will commemorate the second anniversary of the death of one of its foremost directors, Clara Danielson Neligh, at 9 p. m. today.

A program of instrumental, vocal and dramatic recitations will be presented. At the close of the program, the Clara Danielson lamp will be lit for the "Ceremony of Light."

Aid Classes Planned.

The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross will organize a series of first-aid classes for Mondays and Fridays at 10 a. m. Classes will be held in the Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest, beginning Friday.

Commissioners To Remove Last Grade Crossing

Tentatively Accept $100,000 U. S. Grant for Work on Two Projects.

Elimination of the last main line grade crossing in the District loomed yesterday as the District Commissioners tentatively decided to utilize an anticipated $100,000 Federal grant for construction of an overpass on Bates road northeast and to widen the Bladensburg road underpass.

The Bates road crossing, between Varnum street and Brookland avenue, is the last project named in the 1927 act for elimination of grade crossings in the District, according to Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

The Commissioners propose to widen the Bladensburg road underpass, which is between New York avenue and Queens Chapel road northeast, from 40 to 60 feet, width of the roadway on both sides of the underpass.

Money for the project is to be allotted shortly by the Bureau of Public Roads under authorization of the Federal aid act for elimination of grade crossings.

While the money has not been allocated, the Commissioners expect to receive about $100,000 as the District's share under the terms of the act. They desire to have a construction program ready to launch immediately upon receipt of the grant.

Russian Dancers To Appear Tonight

After opening their season in New York's Metropolitan Opera House, the 100 dancers of Col. W. De Basil's Ballet Russe will arrive here on a special train this afternoon for performances with the National Symphony Orchestra tonight and tomorrow night. For the first time the famous Russians will dance to the music of a complete symphony orchestra.

With Hans Kindler, conductor, the National Symphony players leave their accustomed places on the Constitution Hall stage to make way for the dancers, and will occupy chairs in the pit. Dr. Kindler will conduct feature ballets on each performance. One of these will be the "Prince Igor" by Borodin, which will be included on tonight's porgram, and another will be the "Choreartium," the ballet's interpretation of Brahms' Symphony No. 4. This will be a part of Thursday's program.

Gobels Held Entitled to Plant Permit

Commission Delays Move as Citizens Group Continues Fight.

The District Commissioners were advised late yesterday by a special committee that they have no alternative but to grant the application of Adolf Gobel, Inc., for a permit to expand its abattoir in Benning road, west of Anacostia road northeast.

At the same time the committee recommended that specific requirements be met by the applicant and that the District zoning commission be requested to consider immediately an amendment to its regulations prohibiting the establishment or enlarge of abattoirs in Washington except upon approval of the commission.

The Commissioners did not act upon the committee's report, and there were indications that it may override the recommendations in deference to the wishes of the Committee of 100 of the Federal City, headed by Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President, and Secretary Ickes, who is interested in protecting a low-cost housing development near the Gobel plant.

Rules Laid Down.

The special committee, headed by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, advised that the Gobel application for a building permit to erect four buildings, three stories high, and another application of the same number to repair and remodel the sausage manufacturing building and the inedible department building should be granted provided the following conditions are met:

Screening of effluents so that all course particles are removed to the satisfaction of the District sanitary director.

Submit plumbing plans for approval of the sanitary director and the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture.

Submit new drawings on the holding pens for approval of the same two agencies.

Provide water and fly tight manure bins.

Construct a grease tank which shall be operated "so that the effluent therefrom shall not contain more than 75 parts per million of fats as determined by ether extraction."

The committee stated in its report that it had gone exhaustively into the problems involving the Gobel application, had interviewed Federal and District officials and representatives of the Gobel Co., and had made a trip to Baltimore to inspect abattoir regulation in that city.

Code Followed.

"It appears to the committee that the plans of the building comply with the provisions of the building code beyond question," the report said.

"The committee has concerned itself primarily with two questions. First, whether the character and quantity of the water and waste matter which will be introduced by this plant into the sanitary sewer will create a nuisance either in the sewer itself or at the sewage disposal plant; second, whether the plant, when constructed according to the plans, will create a nuisance to the neighborhood in which the proposed establishment is to be constructed.

"On the first question the committee is of the opinion, based entirely upon the report submitted by Mr. Harold A. Kemp (general superintendent of design and construction of the District sewage disposal plant), that the water and waste matter introduced in the sewerage system will not constitute a nuisance provided that the changes in the plumbing plans hereinafter suggested are made, and assuming that the plant will be operated in accordance with the assurances given this committee in writing by the Gobel Co.

Venezuela Rising After Death Of Gomez, Labor Expert Says

Long Rule of Tyrants Is Difficult to Erase, Blelloch Asserts.

DAVID BLELLOCH.

Cipriano Castro was the first. He thundered with a small army into the lowland capital of Caracas in 1899 and for nine years after his invasion Venezuela was poverty-stricken and hopeless.

Juan Vicente Gomez was the next.

He was the semiliterate son of an Indian woman. People called him the witch doctor. They would later speak of him as the catfish tyrant of the Andes. But they would speak in whispers, because for 27 years the torture chambers and the prisons were fed with an almost steady stream of victims as Gomez plunged Venezuela into a bloody dictatorship.

Died in December, 1935.

On December 17, 1935, the capital heard Gomez was dead, but it was two days before the people could believe he was really gone, that the spell was broken. Violent reaction set in. There was blood in the streets. Citizens vowed death to all supporters of Gomez, to the clergy he had favored, to the foreign investors who had bought privileges. They shrieked for social justice, for workers' rights.

Into the vacant office of president stepped Gen. Lopez Contreras, assiduous student of military science. He was minister of war in the Gomez cabinet, but a firm believer in democratic principles. His task was a difficult one and he had to maneuver skillfully to keep in check the riotous sentiment against the old regime. At the same time he had to adjust the grievances of the workers and to formulate an advanced democratic program acceptable to employers and employed.

Called in Labor Expert.

One of his first acts was to call on the International Labor Office of Geneva for an expert to advise on a new labor code. And to Venezuela last February went David Blelloch, Oxford-educated son of a former lieutenant commander in the United States Navy.

Interviewed yesterday on his way back to the "League City" after a ten-month stay in Venezuela, Blelloch discussed provisions of the new far-reaching labor code that was passed last July by the Venezuelan Congress.

"The new code, or constitution, is set forth in 200 articles," he said. "Labor regulations call for a maximum eight-hour day, a 48-hour week. Night work and dangerous occupations for women and minors are forbidden and there are provisions to cover social insurance, health, old age, maternity and death."

Trade unions, too, are revived. Banned or nonexistant under the dictatorship of Gomez, workers' organizations now are coming into their own.

Have Right to Strike.

"The right to strike is now the privilege of workers, but both employers and employes must submit to compulsory arbitration." Blelloch said. "A strike may go into effect five days after the union has given a notification of its intention to the branch of the International Labor Office that has been set up in the capital. This gives the arbitrators sufficient time to try to iron out differences."

Oil is Venezuela's big problem, or rather its biggest problem. The oil concessions were given foreign investors under the regime of Juan Gomez. Naturally, the oil interests were identified with Gomez when the day of retribution came. There were threats, some show of violence, but Contreras saved the day. The workers now are taking enthusiastically to their new labor rights and the oil operators are adjusting themselves to some loss of privileges. General conditions? Venezuela still is a backward country, Blelloch said. Its population is small in proportion to its area. A goodly number of the people are illiterate, though intelligent. Parasitical diseases are unchecked. Malaria, alcoholism and tuberculosis still take a heavy toll. The government is doing its best, but even its best is not enough to wipe out the scourge of the ages that strikes suddenly from the swamps.

22,627 Assisted By Visiting Nurses

Staff nurses of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society cared for 22,627 patients in the first ten months of this year, Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, executive director, reported yesterday at the monthly meeting of the board of directors of the organization. The nurses made 140,649 visits.

Committee reports were made by George Hewitt Myers, chairman, finance committee; Mrs. Charles B. Crawford, surgical supply committee, and Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, publicity committee.

Among the directors present were Mrs. Leonard A. Block, Miss Elizabeth Bryan, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. Charles B. Crawford, Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Joshua Evans, jr., Mrs. Harold Byrnes, Miss Virginia Hunt, John Ihlder, Mrs. Keith Merrill, George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Mrs. Ord Preston, John L. Parking Bans Are Increased At Rush Hour

Commissioners Act to Speed Downtown Traffic in Morning.

One Driving Permit Revoked, 44 Others Are Suspended.

With the aim of clearing heavily-used streets for the morning rush period, the District Commissioners yesterday issued additional parking bans upon recommendation of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

The no parking restrictions, all effective only from 8:30 to 9 a. m., are on the following streets:

West Fifteenth street and Vermont avenue, from Massachusetts avenue to H street, west side.

The regulations are in line, Van Duzer said, with the regulation adopted in October prohibiting commercial vehicles from stopping or parking for loading or unloading on the flow sides of these streets during morning rush periods.

One driving permit was revoked and 44 others suspended for speeding at a meeting of the Revocations Board yesterday.

Guckeyson, Terps' All-Around Ace, to Try to Enter West Point

Star Will Seek Appointment In July

Youth Is Acclaimed the Old Liner's Greatest Athletic Star.

If He Fails to Get a Place He Will Not Turn Pro, Despite Offers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

GUCKEYSON.

Following in the footsteps of "Lighthorse Harry" Wilson, Chris Cagle and other grid greats who matriculated at West Point after graduating from State or private institutions, Bill Guckeyson, Maryland's all-America halfback candidate and all-around athlete, hopes to enter the United States Military Academy next July. The Post learned last night.

Acclaimed the greatest athlete ever enrolled at the Old Line school, a star in baseball, track, basketball and football, although he had no experience on the gridiron before entering college, Guckeyson hopes to win a Congressional appointment to "The Point," thereby realizing a boyhood ambition of a career in the Army. He will be graduated in June with a bachelor of science degree, having majored in bacteriology.

If an appointment is not forthcoming the boy is preparing himself for the annual competitive examination, and in event that he fails to gain admittance through this channel he will return to Maryland for postgraduate work toward a masters' degree. He absolutely will not turn pro after graduating, inasmuch as he is considered Olympic material as a decathlon man, and nourishes another ambition to be a member of Uncle Sam's athletic expedition to Japan in 1940.

Pro Offers Refused.

He already has refused several offers to play pro football and, after toying with the idea for a time, has decided against a professional career although several veteran observers, including Walter Johnson, have predicted a brilliant diamond future for him.

A trip to West Point with Maryland's baseball team, which played the Cadets last May, regenerated Guckeyson's lifelong but secret desire to enroll there. This will be his last year of eligibility as he will attain his twenty-third year, the age limit for plebes, in July. A sergeant in the school's Reserve Officers Training Corps, student leader and high ranking scholar, he seems ideally suited, mentally and physically, for a military career.

Coach Frank Dobson, of Maryland, whose son is a cadet at the academy, has interested himself in Guckeyson's case and written a letter of recommendation for him. Meanwhile, "Gike" is cramming on mathematics and preparing to gain admittance the hard way, or via the competitive exam.

Irish Practice Long On Kicker Protection

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 10 (AP).—Protection of the kicker, something which the Notre Dame football line has failed to do this year, received plenty of attention today as Coach Elmer Layden conducted a long drill on mistakes made against the Navy last Saturday.

A special train carrying the Irish team to the Army game Saturday will leave here Thursday afternoon. Another special, carrying 500 students, will leave Friday afternoon.

Pro Team for District Nearer After Parley

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Professional football moved a step nearer Washington yesterday. Pursuing his threat to transfer the National Football League franchise of the Boston Redskins to the Capital next season, Owner George Marshall conferred with Clark Griffith and was offered the full co-operation of Griffith Stadium officials.

Convinced that he could reach satisfactory terms with Griffith for the use of the stadium, Marshall announced that he would entrain to New York tomorrow to discuss with minority stockholders the prospective transfer of the franchise, to which he is now committed.

Neither Marshall nor Griffith submitted rental figures for the stadium, but both expressed the belief that satisfactory arrangements could be concluded and Griffith added to Marshall's convictions a hearty indorsement of the glowing possibilities of professional football here.

Marshall, thoroughly soured on the apathy of Boston fans and newspapers toward his Redskins, who are operating at a loss for their third successive season, yesterday reiterated his dissatisfaction with the situation in Boston.

"They do not seem to appreciate big league football in Boston and we cannot continue to take a loss each season," Marshall declared.

"Last Sunday, for example, while teams in the rest of the cities were drawing huge crowds, the Redskins and Greenbay Packers, a team that is tied for the lead in the western section, drew only $10,200 at the gate. And the week before, playing the Chicago Cardinals, the Redskins hit a new low gate of $5,700.

"The pay roll is high in this league and a team must average $12,000 gate to break even. Not a man on our club receives less than $125 per game and in the course we are faced with a heavy loss.

"Personally, I am fed up with Boston. The newspapers up there devote so much space to racing and college football that the National Professional League is treated like a minor sport, despite the fact that newspapers in every other city recognize the league as being on the same plane as the major baseball leagues.

'I wasn't kidding," Marshall added, "when I advised the Boston papers I was ready to withdraw the team. Next Sunday will be the absolute last test. If our game with the Chicago Bears, who are tied for the lead in the West, does not draw $25,000 at the gate, then I will pull out.

"I can't continue to operate in Boston at this rate. With the best team in our history, we are far from breaking even. Yet the Philadelphia team, which has won only one game in ten starts, is showing a $6,000 profit on the season. That's the tip-off."

Marshall, a 51 per cent stockholder, anticipates no interference from league officials in his proposed transfer of the Boston franchise. Visiting teams have long been dissatisfied with their share of the gate receipts in Boston and are eager to include a more responsive city in the league.

"There is no city I would more prefer to place my team in than Washington," Marshall continued. "After all, I am 600 miles away from Boston and it is virtually a foreign investment up there. I believe that Washington, with its cosmopolitan population, would easily support a pro team that plays on Sundays."

Bannockburn Will Promote D. C. Open

Houghton said that he expected some 30 professionals from Washington, Baltimore and Virginia to participate. George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring County Club, is defending champion. The purse is expected to amount to more than $100, according to Houghton. Entries should be filed with him at Bannockburn.

In view of lack of interest, plans for holding the tournament were abandoned earlier in the season.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Charles Kurtsinger, jockey, was exonerated today in the death of Miss Anna Ray, 49, of Yonkers, who was killed by an automobile August 30. He told the Westchester County grand jury it was not his car that struck the woman.

Texas Coach Resigns at Banquet

Jack Chevigny, Attacked by Alumni, Announces His Retirement.

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 10.—Coach Jack Chevigny, of the University of Texas, announced tonight he would not be coach of the Texas Longhorns next fall.

The football mentor, under fire because of his team's consistent losses, said he would not seek to renew his contract with the university on its expiration February 1, 1937.

Chevigny's announcement came at the conclusion of a speech at a dinner in honor of the football team on the eve of its departure for Minneapolis to play the Minnesota Gophers Saturday.

Chevigny did not give a reason other than to indicate he was considering practicing law.

Chevigny, despite bitter criticism, which included public accusations that his team played "dirty" football, has made no official reply to the charges.

Littlefield Favored.

Many of the "old guard" alumni were said to favor Clyde Littlefield, coach of freshman football and track, who preceded Chevigny as head mentor, as his successor.

"I sincerely believe that the team has played as great a brand of football every Saturday this season as could be seen anywhere in the Nation," he said. "I am deeply grateful for all you have done for us and I am proud to be associated with so fine a group of men."

Shoeless Grid Star To Rassle in Defense

Gufport, Miss., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Shoeless Hampton Potts, whose bare big toe can punt the pigskin 50 yards and more, is taking up wrestling in self-defense. He leads Gulf Coast Military Academy's undefeated football team into action every week-end—without shoes. He finally protested when opponents began to twist his bare toes as if to tear them out by the roots.

British Capture Horse Show Laurels

Win Before 15,000 After Two Jump-Offs; U. S. Team Is Third.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—A quartet of British officers, riding as if they were taking the Grand National Course at Aintree, tonight won the international military jumping championship as the National Horse Show closed with more than 15,000 spectators packing Madison Square Garden to its capacity.

With the seemingly lazy Lieut. J. A. Talbot-Ponsonby, winner of the individual title, riding anchor with his easy-going big bay horse, Kineton, the British survived two jump-offs to take the coveted trophy they last won in 1910, the year military competition was inaugurated at the National.

United States Is Third.

Third place went to the United States team from Fort Riley, Kans., and fourth to Chile. France, with the peerless Capt. Pierre Clave unable to show his best due to an injury received in a fall this morning, Canada and Sweden completed the field.

Two of the finest horses ever seen in a show ring successfully defended their laurels when Etta Kett from Frances Dodge's Rochester (Mich.) stable, and Judy King's Knight Bachelor, of Atlanta, Ga., repeated their 1935 triumphs.

The battle for the harness horse championship was strictly a duel between Knight Bachelor and Shalimar. Miss Dodge's chestnut had beaten the Knight last night and was favored to turn the trick again today. Patty McConnell, veteran reinsman, took Miss King's big black in hand, however, and he gave one of his fine exhibitions to score after lengthy deliberation by the judges.

Knight Bachelor warmed up for his grand finale by taking the measure of many of the leading harness horses over 14.2 hands, driven by the owner or member of the owner's immediate family. Miss King handled the Knight's reins and did a fine job to beat Potentilla, owned and driven by Miss Dodge.

Central Easily Downs Roosevelt Eleven, 24-0

Game This Week.
Tech at Eastern, 3:15 p. m.

Producing four touchdowns while keeping its half of the field unsoiled by rival cleats, Central High rolled over Roosevelt High yesterday, 24 to 0, to go into a tie with Western for second place in the inter-high series.

A crowd of 3,000, about one-third of it looking through the Roosevelt Stadium fence, watched the Rough Riders hold the inter-high champs to 6-0 in the first half but fold up completely in the last two periods. Quarterback Billy Vermillion and Fullback Bill Wooten scored the four touchdowns, two apiece.

The game was marred by 10 fumbles, eight of them by Central. The powerful running of the hard driving Wooten was the most encouraging development from a Central viewpoint. Roosevelt's offensive has not been particularly impressive all season so the mere fact Central bottled up the Rough Riders' attack is worthy only of passing note.

Wooten Makes Long Runs.

The champions' first touchdown came after Bill Ickes, who is no relation to the Secretary of the Interior, returned a punt 23 yards to the Roosevelt 16. Vermillion picked up 9 yards and Wooten made it a first down on the three where Vermillion shot through the Roosevelt right guard for the score. He missed his placekick attempt.

Roosevelt, incidentally, failed to take advantage of three fumbles recovered by John Frennan, left tackle, as poor quarterbacking and blocking prevented its best ballcarrier, Ray Fridirick, from getting loose, although he was good for a few yards almost every time he took the ball.

Wooten broke away for a 21-yard run in the second quarter but Bill Richards, scrappy Rough Rider back, saved a touchdown by throwing him outside on the Roosevelt 39. Early in the third period, however, Wooten cut loose for a 15-yard touchdown run, scoring on sheer power and shiftiness after John Pistolas had recovered a fumble by Richards on the Roosevelt 15.

Vermillion Scores.

Vermillion threw a pass to Wooten in the same period which was good for 35 yards when the big fullback fought his way 25 yards to the 8-yard line, where Bill Hudson threw him out of bounds. Vermillion hit the Roosevelt left side of the line for the touchdown but Frank Hodge missed the placekick.

A 30-yard march in which a pass from Chacos to Sam Fox picked up 9 yards and Wooten and Vermillion contributed the rest tool. Central to the 5-yard line, where Wooten plowed through for the fourth and

Service Game Sellout; Scalpers Legal Prey

Lewis Is Backed As No. 1 Heavy Contender

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 10.—James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden boxing matchmaker, said today he is going to try to induce the New York State Athletic Commission to withdraw Max Schmeling as heavyweight champion Jim Braddock's title challenger and Substitute John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight king.

"Why should a German be permitted to come over and take a wad of dough out of the country?" Johnston asked. "Lewis deserves a shot at the heavyweight title and I'm going to fight for it. He's an American citizen, born in Arizona. Also, he's a great fighter."

Lewis Under Ban Until He Fights Here.

Ed Foster, president of the National Boxing Association was in Washington yesterday discussing the recent John Henry Lewis flare-up with Maj. Heine Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, which set off the spark that banned the worlds light heavyweight boxing championship in all States governed by the N. B. A.

Foster looked over the contract with Lewis' manager signed for a bout at Griffith Stadium a few months ago—a bout he pulled out of a week before it was to come off.

Until Lewis signs for a match in Washington at some future date, his ban in America and Europe as well, will not be lifted, Foster pointed out. Foster suggested a date next summer when the Arizona Negro would draw a large crowd.

Secretary Miller announced that the District Boxing Commission would officially recognize Johnny Lucas as District welterweight champion at its next meeting. Lucas defeated Phil Furr Monday night.

Tennis 'Open' Play Is Seen As Likely

Perry's Turning Pro Is Believed Stimulus to Force the Move.

Drifting of Topnotch Net Stars to Pro Ranks to Change Attitude.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 10.—Fred Perry's desertion of the ranks of amateur tennis players today was believed to be the necessary stimulus which will result in forcing an "open" tennis tournament—one in which professionals and amateurs would compete the same as in golf.

With Britain's hope of retaining the Davis Cup and the All-England men's singles title gone when Perry turned professional, it was believed that the attitude of the British Lawn Tennis Association, heretofore rigidly opposed to professionals mixing with amateurs except in coaching capacities, would shortly undergo a drastic change.

The association steadfastly has refused to recognize professional tennis "circuses," as they are called here. It is recalled that early this year the association prohibited a trio of British pros from competing in a tournament at Blackpool in which Hans Nusslein, Bill Tilden and other monied players competed.

Others May Turn Pro.

Later in the summer, the association did continue to promote its own annual professional championships which are confined to British professional coaches. Now that Perry has turned professional—and with his desertion of amateur ranks comes the belief that other English stars also will quit soon—it is believed his move may strengthen arguments of those seeking "open" tennis competition.

Strengthening the belief that other British players may turn professional, is a conversation the writer heard at the clubhouse of the Liverpool Northern Lawn Tennis Club last May after Perry and Pat Hughes had appeared in an exhibition. During the general conversation, Hughes said: "Well, Fred, I guess we know a couple of fellows who won't be playing on the 1937 Davis Cup team." Perry replied: "Yes, sir."

Coincident with the news of Perry's change, a circular letter arrived from the All-India Lawn Tennis Association advocating "open" competition.

Dartmouth Won't Accept Bowl Bid

By the United Press.

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 10.—It hasn't been invited, but if Dartmouth is extended a Rose Bowl bid it won't accept, President Ernest Martin Hopkins said tonight.

"Dartmouth never has played any postseason games," Hopkins asserted. "We've been sounded out several times in past years about the Rose Bowl game but each time have declined. The answer would be the same if we were invited this year."

Hopkins said a transcontinental trip for the January 1 game at Pasadena would interfere with mid-year examinations and necessitate extending practice into the late season when "Hanover weather is not the sort to make football practice enjoyable. There's no sense in making football a hardship instead of a game."

Seven K. O.'s Mark Golden Gloves Bouts

Twenty Novices Attain Second Round in Tourney

Twenty youngsters, trained to the minute mentally and physically, battled their way into the second round of the fourth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament, which opened last night at Catholic University's gymnasium before a wildly cheering crowd of 1,500 dyed in the wool amateur fight fans.

Seven knockouts added spice to the program, four of the seven kayoes being of the technical variety.

First to scorea quick victory was a keen-eyed youngster named Archie Hearn, of Phil Bobys Athletic Club, who saw his 112-pound bout with William Jensen, unattached, stopped in the first round. Hearn threw so much leather at Jensen that the latter never had a chance.

Albert Miller, also competing in the 112-pound novice class, scored a clean knockout over Grover Davis, of Police Boys Club, flattening his opponent with a barrage of body punches, which Davis just could not take.

Lean Jim Willis, of Phil Bobys, had too much reach and punch for little Frank Caruso, of Washington Boys Club, and won by a technical knockout in the second round, Caruso's seconds tossing in the proverbial towel to save their charge from further punishment. competed in the 126-pound class.

Vernon Haynes, of Merrick Boys Club, and Jake Carter, unattached, advanced in the 135-pound division. Haynes, displaying a two-fisted attack from the very outset, won a technical knockout over Julian Dimeglio, of the National Guards, in the third round. Carter won unanimously over Bob Goran, of Merrick.

N. C. State to Be at Full Strength for First Time Against C. U.

Eagles to Play Hopkins in Other Tilt

State Has All-America Candidate in 'Cowboy' Robinson, a Back.

Emerging from its torrid struggle with Boston College last week, lost by a 7-to-3 score in the last few minutes of play, North Carolina's Wolfpack will invade Brookland Saturday for Catholic University's home-coming, in full cry and at full strength for the first time since the start of the campaign. "Hunk" Anderson's men have shown improvement with each added start and, with his full roster available, the cagey mentor should show the folks a plentiful assortment of fireworks.

Most important of those recently returned to the firing line is "Cowboy" Robinson, All-American candidate and triple-threat star of the backfield. Robinson has been hailed as the greatest gridman to matriculate at State in recent years. He performed against the Cards last season, but couldn't get going in the mud.

Eddie Entwistle, another back of no little prestige, Dan Piloseno and Al Regdon, first string guards, also will be available for duty, and their presence in the line-up will not help Catholic's cause.

Eagles vs. Hopkins.

Another home-coming attraction on Saturday's bill brings Johns Hopkins into American University's backyard in the main attraction of the Eagles' annual celebration. Neither did very well last week, American dropping a 48-to-7 decision to Randolph-Macon while Hopkins bowed to Swarthmore, 40 to 10, but when they get together in their own shindig action is hot and fast.

In justice to Coach Walter Young it must be pointed out that he was obliged to use a badly crippled team against Randolph-Macon and it was not a true test of American's ability. Only three regulars, Pete Sitnick and George Brown, linemen, and Ralph Winslow, halfback, were available. This week, however, Young hopes to have his first team intact.

Catawba may not have the greatest team in the world, but judging by its press releases it has one of the most confident. Last night's dispatch was a printed warning to George Washington to beware of the Indians who are coming to Washington for the sole purpose of upsetting the Colonials.

Fleet backs, a light but hard-charging line and a spirit that probably could move mountains, let alone George Washington's gridmen, are Catawba's only weapons, but they may prove to be effective.

One of the outstanding stars of the team is "Ole Joe" Clark, 160-pound triple-threat halfback who picked up 167 yards from scrimmage against the previously undefeated and untied Appalachian eleven last week. The boy is hailed as one of the greatest passers and punters along "Tobacco Road."

"Lab Day" restricted Georgetown's practice to little more than a light, limbering up drill as only 20 men reported to Coach Jack Hagerty. Good news for Blue and Gray supporters was forthcoming, however, in the announcement that Jack Fleming, the team's ace punter, will be ready to play against Manhattan. Hagerty intends to use him sparingly, though, inserting him in the line-up when and if the boys need a good, long punt to get them out of trouble.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

George Preston Marshall, who parlayed a cake of soap into a far-flung and highly profitable chain of laundries, feels something of a keen personal disgrace in the failure of his Boston Redskins to show a financial profit and thus it is that he is ready to pull out of Boston.

POVICH.

At his sumptuous laundry headquarters at Ninth and H streets where half a thousand of his hired help take in the wash, Marshall was fairly waxing wroth. The man who came out of the Army to take a fling at play acting and producing, who bought a professional basketball team, made good as a newspaper publisher, bought a big league football team and married a movie actress, has no patience with a loser.

"I won't stand for it," he declared in a half-shout. "There's no sense to it. Up there in Boston I've given 'em the best team they've had in years, a team that's only a half game behind the lead, and the fans and newspapers up there are giving us less support than ever. This football is big business. A man can lose his shirt in it, but I'm not going to. I'm going to keep this football team and make money with it."

Whereupon Marshall revealed that the National Professional Football League is, indeed, big business. Still in its infancy, the league has sprouted into a money-maker in every other big city in the league except Boston, where Marshall's teams for three seasons have failed to show a profit. Marshall emphasized his point.

"Do you know that we've got to take in $72,000 in our six home games before we can make a dime?" he queried. I didn't know it, but it was interesting. "Well, we do," went on Marshall. "That means we've got to take in $12,000 each game before we make a nickel.

"We've got to give the visiting club a guarantee of $4,000 for each game, and then we've got to give them an option of a percentage if they want it. That means we've got to give 'em 40 per cent of the receipts after 17 per cent is taken off the top by the home club for park rental and expenses. By that time you're not meeting the pay roll unless you have at least $12,000 in the house."

How was Boston taking Mr. Marshall's threat to transfer his franchise to Washington, this department was curious to know.

"That's an idea, we'll find out," said Marshall, reaching for his telephone desk set and demanding a Boston number. A minute later he was talking to his Boston agent.

"How's Boston reacting?" he demanded. And then, "O-ho, so they do, huh? Well, tell 'em for me that I wasn't kidding, that I'll yank that team outa there quicker than I can hang up on you. I've got a place to put that ball team right here in Washington.

"Tell 'em I'm absolutely washed up with the town unless there's a $25,000 gate on Sunday when we play the Bears."

What did the league think about this idea of a transfer to Washington, I was asking.

"The league? We'll find out about that, too." Then, signalling his switchboard, he ordered: "Get me Joe Carr, president of the National Football League at Columbus, Ohio. You know his number."

By this time this department was feeling a bit conscience-stricken concerning the man's phone bill, was ready to take Mr. Marshall's word for it that the league was agreeable, and stifled a temptation to ask Mr. Marshall what Mr. Mahatma Ghandi over at Bombay was thinking about the idea.

Nealis Medalist In Turkey Golf Tourney

George Nealis, young public links golfer, yesterday was declared the medalist in the Rock Creek turkey golf tournament. He posted 36-35—71. Bob Leapley, with 36-36—72, was second.

Match play in five flights will start today, with the medalist opposing J. Andestad. All of the favorites qualified.

Qualifying in the East Potomac turkey tournament will end today. Qualifiers will have two days in which to play their first round matches.

Maryland Has 10 Ironmen In Line

There is an old saying that the coat and pants do all the work but the vest gets all the gravy, and Maryland's current football aggregation bears eloquent testimony to the veracity of the axiom.

Bill Guckeyson, "Jumbo Jim" Meade, Coleman Headley, Charley Ellinger, Johnny Gormley and other gacks have been the toast of College Park and a large portion of adjacent territory this season, but the line, which is doing a remarkably good job, has been almost completely ignored. Of course it wasn't supposed to be a very good line, anyway, and this probably accounts for the oversight, even in view of the fact that it surprised everybody by developing into a mighty fine front line.

The last Iron-man" eleven of note was graduated from Brown University in 1926 and since then the term has fallen into disuse, bnt it will have to be revived here to adequately describe the Terp mules. Ten men, Vic Willis and Blair Smith, ends; Ed Fletcher and "Turk" Birkland, tackles; Bill Wolfe and Mike Surgent, guards; and Bob Walton, center, have played virtually all of Maryland's line football, with Charley Zulick, Nick Budkoff and Frank DeArmey filling in at various times.

Navy-Harvard Tickets At Keystone Auto Club

The Keystone Automobile Club has tickets for the football game to be played between the United States Naval Academy and Harvard at Boston Saturday, November 14. Tickets may be obtained at Keystone headquarters, 1643 Connecticut avenue.

In response to numerous inquiries, club officials stated that they do not have tickets for the Army-Navy game, at Philadelphia November 28.

Bob Grimm Coaches.

Bob Grimm, former 155-pound Golden Gloves champion, will coach boxing for the Roosevelt Community Center this year, Director Herman Littman has announced. Lessons will be given on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 10:30 o'clock. Admission is open to all.

Devitt Is Slight Favorite Over Bullis Prep

Silver Spring Team Sees Its First Win in Series Nevertheless.

The annual Devitt Prep Bullis Prep football game, scheduled for tomorrow, will be held in Central High Stadium at 3 p. m., the schools announced yesterday. Meanwhile both teams continued hard workouts yesterday in preparation for the battle.

Annually one of the prep school grid classics, the game this year takes on added interest since Devitt bowed unexpectedly to Staunton Military School, Friday. The locals had been favored to win over both Staunton and Bullis, but the Cadets' 20-0 victory succeeded in also lowering the slightly favored Devitt's stock for the Bullis fray.

Coach Jim McNamara, however, has the Devitteers pointed for Bullis and expects them to rebound from the Staunton defeat. Bullis, on the other hand, is confident of halting its rivals for the first time in the schools' series.

D. C. Boys in Line-up.

Coach McNamara expects to start a line-up composed of close to two-thirds of Washington boys. At the wings, he will have Charlie Arnold, of Central, and Earl Fox, former Eastern all-high tackle. Fred Pascale, former Grover Cleveland High star in Brooklyn, will be at one tackle, with Frank Witt, former Roosevelt star at the other. Gus Papanicolas, scrappy Roosevelt guard, and Howard Fields, of Lorain, Ohio, will take care of the guard assignments, while Capt. Moe Schulman, Tech High's all-High center, will be at his usual post.

In the backfield Ed Lyman, former Roosevelt speedster, is calling the signals, with Ben Cohen, former West Philadelphia High star, at one halfback and Glenn (Hawk) Shaw, formerly of Eastern, at the other. Lee Fones, all-Virginia star for George Washington High of Alexandria, will be at the fullback post.

Middleburg's Racing Meet Set Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 10.—With the Glenwood race course in excellent condition and a large number of America's best steeplechasers entered, prospects are fine for a big day of racing tomorrow, when the fall meet of the Middleburg Hunt opens at Glenwood, estate of D. C. Sands. A recent rain has made the course soft and the going will be good. Five races will be run tomorrow, with the first to be called at 1:30 p. m. Saturday will conclude the meet with five races again lined up for that day. The feature being the Glenwood National Steeplechase, which carries a $1,000 purse.

Pitt Squad Will Leave Today for Nebraska

Pittsburgh, Nov. 10 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh's Panthers will leave tomorrow for Lincoln, Nebr., and arrive there Saturday about three hours before they step onto the gridiron to meet Nebraska's Huskers.

The Panthers are due in Chicago Thursday for a workout at Stagg Field and will remain in Omaha Friday night.

Casanova Beaten.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Charley Gomer, rugged Baltimore lightweight, pounded out a ten-round victory over Rodolfo ("Baby") Casanova, of Mexico, in the feature bout at the Broadway Arena tonight. Gomer weighed 135 pounds and Casanova 129¼.

Ring Unit Bars Exhibition by Braddock

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Joe Gould, manager of James J. Braddock, the heavyweight champion, told the New York State Athletic Commission today the announcement that Braddock would meet Jack McCarthy, of Boston, in a six-round exhibition in New Orelans on November 16, was erroneous.

Gould made this statement when the commission informed him it would countenance no exhibitions by Braddock until he has posted a check for $5,000 as evidence of his intention to fight Max Schmeling for the title next June.

"Braddock will remain at Hot Springs for another three weeks," Gould said, "and then will come to New York to appear before the commission for a physical examination. He positively will not book exhibitions until they have been approved by the commission."

The champ feels better than he has for a year, Gould said. He does 4 or 5 miles of road work daily in addition to several rounds of bag punching. He weighs 197.

mad man, Charlie Mamione, of Police Boys Club, fired a steady volley of punches at J. Waicikasas, of Phil Bobys, and succeeded in knocking him out in the second round, after the Phil Bobys' challenger twice dropped to the canvas. Mamione was one of six boxers who entered the second round of the 147-pound division.

In that same class Norwood Lehner, lone entry from Baltimore Y. M. C. A., put on a spectacular third-round rally to take the decision from Irvin Smith, of Phil Bobys. S. Cain, of Merrick, won from A. Bright, Terminal Y. M. C. A., easily.

The comedy bout was provided earlier in the evening by Bernie (Mike Diz) Eslin, unattached, and Orville Lyons, of Northeast Boys Club, who won with the greatest of ease, despite the clownish fist-throwing of Eslin. It appeared that Eslin was more interested in getting his picture snapped while trading punches with Lyons at close range.

Novice Classes.

112 pounds—Eddie Kane (N. E. B. C.) outpointed Bob Litaker (Phil Bobys).

Willie Tapp (Police B. C.) outpointed John Placas (Merrick).

J. Mooney (Merrick) wins forfeit over J. Wadworth.

126 pounds—W. Allison (Merrick) outpointed E. Osborne (N. E. B. C.).

John Carroll (Merrick) outpointed Bob Hazedom (Merrick).

Cox (Merrick) outpointed J. Fox (Police B. C.); Gus Koustenas (Washington B. C.) wont by a technical knockout over H. Schwier (Terminal Y. M. C. A.) in the third round; E. Klanzer (Jewish Community Center) won a technical knockout in third round over Bernie Jackson.

Ruth Sigman, No. 2 ranking table tennis star among United States women, currently visiting Washington with her playing partner, Stanley Fields, on an exhibition tour of the country.

Pretty Anne Sigman, No. 2 ranking national table tennis star among the women, is appearing twice nightly at the Shoreham Hotel as a feature of the floor show, and meets all challengers. To any who can beat her she cheerfully presents a bottle of the sparkling vintage.

Miss Sigman has been barnstorming around the country with 19-year-old Stanley Fields, brilliant Eastern States champion exhibiting her skill at various night clubs and theaters.

Her exhibition has been sanctioned by the United States Table Tennis Association, for part of the proceeds from her show will go to a fund to send a table tennis team to Vienna next year to represent America in the world championships.

Only one person in the last year has been able to win a bottle of champagne. That's how good a player Miss Sigman is. She is a New York girl, tall, a brunette, and knows more tricks with that ping pong ball than the late Thurston.

Her exhibitions start at 9:30 and 11:30.

War on Sand Traps!

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—A campaign by the Professional Golfers Association to give the game, or at least a lot of it, back to the duffer, has borne fruit in the form of savings to clubs totaling $320,000.

Missionary work by A. W. Tillinghast, famous course designer and consulting architect for the P. G. A., has accounted for the saving in money—not to mention all the headaches it has and will save for the "100-shooter."

In his report today at the opening session of the association's annual meeting, Tillinghast said he had suggested the removal of 7,427 unnecessary sand traps, hazards of the duffer's headache type, from 370 courses he has inspected. He estimated the cost per year of maintaining each sand trap at $25, producing a saving of $185,675 annually.

The P. G. A. found that courses made unnecessarily difficult drove more ordinary players to other forms of amusement, than lack of money to invest in a game, during the lean years. Tillinghast set out on a tour to help correct the situation. His investigation indicated that numerous courses were trapped until they almost resembled beaches to keep them out of the sissy class.

On one course alone, he condemned 92 traps and still left enough sand to provide an honest test of golfing skill. From another he suggested the elimination of 41 traps without making the layout soft.

Tillinghast said other savings were effected through advice on remodeling courses, without the purchase of additional land. He said one club was saved around $10,000 it had expected to spend, when it was possible to add three holes without the purchase of more real estate.

Tickets for the Georgetown-Maryland football game to be played on November 21 at College Park are now on sale at the Athletic Offices at Georgetown and Maryland; A. G. Spalding & Sons, 717 Fourteenth street northwest, and the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Reserved seats and boxes are priced at $1.65 and general admission at $1.10.

Cools Bowlers Defeated by Barbers

Pennant Dash Is Halted; Keith Takes Dixie Sweepstakes.

The mad dash of the Cool Drinks team for the pennant in the Columbia Heights League was halted abruptly last night at the Arcadia alleys, the Vincent Barbers stopping the pace-setters in all three games. C. & C. Restaurant barely missed going into a tie for the lead, falling one game short in taking the odd game from Arcadia.

Hessick Coal Co. annexed high-scoring honors, establishing two new season marks, a 647 game and 1,836 set. Fred Murphy contributed largely to the Coalmen's record-breaking efforts with a 155 game and 409 set. Hertz Drivyurself were the victims, bowing twice.

In the other matches, Premier Cab nosed out Arcade Sunshine and Eagle Bedding Co. took the odd one from Ben Hundley Tire.

Eddie Keith's "pot game practice" stood him in good stead last night when he led 12 entries to the wire to win a free entry in the Dixie Sweepstakes which opens Saturday afternoon at the Arcade Alleys. Keith made it tough for his rivals when he started his three-game string with a 181 game, and finished with 418. Howard Parsons finished second with 402; Lindsey Scott, third with 381, and Fred Murphy, fourth with 380.

The Colonials cleaned up in the Washington Ladies League, annexing high team game and set with 528 and 1,542, respectively. Individual honors were taken by Polly Shugrue with a 126 game and 337 set . . . Falk's 157 game was the best individual effort in the Lutheran Church League. Luther Place shot 593 and 1,704 to win team honors.

12 Schools Get Feelers for Third Orange Bowl Tilt

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 10.—Invitations were sent to 12 colleges today to play the third annual Orange Bowl football game here New Year's Day.

Six of the "feelers" went to Southern schools, five to Eastern colleges and one to a Midwestern institution.

Seeking a representative team, the South, Keith Phillips, chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, invited Alabama, Tulane, Louisiana State, Auburn, Duke and Tennessee.

In the East, Fordham's Rams, potential material for the Rose Bowl, headed the invitation list. Pittsburg, Villanova, Holy Cross and Temple completed the Eastern group.

"We're trying to get the best two teams, one to represent the South and one to play for the North," he said.

In last season's annual orange bowl play, "Yankee" Catholic University of Washington defeated "Rebel" Ole Miss 21-20.

Boys Club Plays.

Primed for an Armistice game, the Police Boys Club No. 5 Precinct eleven will meet the Woodchester, Va., team today at Woodchester. The locals are coached by Phil Fox, former Wilson Teachers star.

Perry Praises Amateur Game

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 10.—Fred Perry, of England, looked back on a brilliant amateur tennis career today with fondness—but no regret.

Yesterday the outstanding amateur net star in the world, today a newly christened professional, the slim, lanky Englishman made his shift to the money ranks with one significant gesture. He didn't knock the amateur sport or the men behind it.

"I realize that all I am, and all that I hope to be in the future, I owe to the amateur game," he explained.

Perry said he and Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, another former amateur star now considered the best professional in the business, had been negotiating for a professional tie-up for some time.

He and Vines are to meet in singles matches, and two others are to be added to the troupe for doubles.

"We are all to work on a percentage of the gat receipts," Perry said. "I'm not interested in guarantees. All this talk of what I will realize is just so much guesswork, but naturally I'm out to make all I can."

Perry disclosed he and his wife, pretty Helen Vinson of the films, have bought a home in Hollywood, and that he may try a movie tennis picture shortly.

Meantime he warned net fans not to sell England short in Davis Cup play next year merely because of his withdrawal.

"Don't think that England is prepared to give up the Davis Cup next year without a struggle simply because I'm out of it," he said. "With me out of the way, there are several others who will have a chance to move into the tennis picture there. They might surprise the world.

"Germany, with Von Cramm, and Australia, will both be up there, particularly if Jack Crawford of Australia thinks better of his plan to quit international tennis."

Of Vines, Perry said:

"I'm inclined to believe that Ellsworth will be very hard to beat."

Snobby Scamp Captures $1,400 Handicap at Pimlico Track

$49 Returned By Overlap In First

Gilbert Gives Feature Winner Good Ride, Is Worth $13.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 10.—Mrs. John Bosley, jr., who makes pets of her race horses, saw her Snobby Scamp score a smashing victory today in the Charles L. A. Heiser Handicap, the day's feature race at this turf establishment. The Sea Scamp gelding earned $1,400 in the mile and a sixteenth test for horses foaled in Maryland. Iron Ore, owned by Jefferson Cohen and trained by Selby Burch was second while running as a heavily-played favorite. Third money went to J. C. Taylor's Canpra. The "also rans" numbered five.

Mrs. Bosley, owner of the ill-fated horse, Chase Me, a sensation of a few years back, added a nice piece of silver plate to her trophy collection as the result of Snobby Scamp's victory. The betting public which backed her horse was rewarded at the rate of $13 for the usual $2.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert gave Snobby Scamp a good ride to get him home by a neck margin. Although he broke second, Gilbert allowed the gelding to settle into his stride while Nella Canter, Sit Out and Canpra fought a battle for the pace. Iron Ore was right along with Snobby camp. Approaching the stretch, Gilbert put his muont to a drive and the gelding went to the front. Peters then sent Iron Ore around and the favorite loomed as a threat. However, in the final drive Snobby Scamp stuck to his guns while Iron Ore hung.

A crowd of 9,000 watched the race run under cloudless skies, but over a slow, dull track. The time of 1:49 2-5 was mediocre even under the condition.

The long-shot players were off to a flying start in the first race when E. K. Bryson's Overlap awoke to the tune of a $49.10 mutuel. The Broadway Jones colt, handled by Jockey Bobby Root, took a half-length decision from Marfeu, with Happy Hostess third in the field of 12. Among the disappointments in the group was Nadir, a heavily played favorite from the Montpelier barn and trained by Selby Burch. The race was run over a dull track in 1:16 2-5.

Glowing Coal Pays $22.90.

With the exception of a couple of wobbly landings, the day's steeplechase event was run without mishap. The winner turned up in National Anthem, with Swimalong second and the favored Good Chance third. National Anthem carried Swimalong wide going to the final jump, but the stewards disallowed Jockey Thorndyke's claim of foul. Good Chance probably would have won but for a poor landing at the final fence when he was about to take command. The winner paid a $9.60 mutuel.

A futile claim of foul also marked the third race, but Glowing Coal's number stayed in the winning position. Jockey Joe Renick brought the daughter of Trojan from far back in the field to take command in the late stretch, but in doing so bumped High Flag. The latter finished second ahead of Sandy Belle. Glowing Coal paid a $22.90 mutuel.

Trainer Hirsch Jacobs added another purse to his long string in the fourth race when Duel, in the role of a $4.90 favorite while coupled with Tap On, easily defeated a field of 11. Strabo was second and Seventh Inning third. Early Settler, a paddock tip, quit badly after opening a long lead along the backstretch.

First Pigeon Worth $19.50.

The familiar colors of the Denemark horses were borne to victory again in the sixth race when Grand Duke took a length-and-a-half decision from Billy Bee, with Sergt. Byrne, the favorite, third in a field of good sprinters. Jockey H. Dabson rode a heady race on the winner, taking his charge in hand when Marching Home and Shoeless Joe fought for the lead. In the stretch, Dabson shook up Grand Duke and the Stimalus gelding hopped to the front and won easily. Sergt. Byrne was away poorly, but closed gamely. The Denemark entry paid a $7 mutuel.

First Pigeon took a photographic decision from Acautaw to pay a $19.50 mutuel in the seventh race. Blind Brook was third in the field of 12.

The day's finale went to Master Lad at a $6.20 mutuel. Weston took second, with Stavka third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OVERLAP, $49.10, $25.60, $10.60; MARFEU, $10.90, $6.90; HAPPY HOSTESS, $12.80.

OVERLAP, rushed into contention going to the first turn, took command with good speed entering the stretch and was kept to a drive to hold MARFEU safe in the closing stages. MARFEU, a forward factor throughout, closed with good courage under pressure. HAPPY HOSTESS finished resolutely on the outside. YOUNG AGNES saved ground all the way. NIPPONESE started from outside the gates, was away slowly and closed a gap. HAPPY HAZEL could not keep up.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000. The Elkridge Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:04½. Off at 2:05½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NATIONAL ANTHEM, $9.60, $5.50, $3.90; SWIMALONG, $8.40, $4.10; GOOD CHANCE, $2.80.

NATIONAL ANTHEM, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning and fencing well, moved to the front when turned loose the second time around, ran wide into the final fence and had to be kept to a drive at the end. SWIMALONG, closest to the pace of TOP WAVE, took the lead when that one quit, was carried wide by the winner approaching the final jump and closed willingly. GOOD CHANCE made bad landings at the seventh and thirteenth fences, almost losing ride at the latter, while closing on rivals. RED SHANK lacked speed throughout. TOP WAVE tired from setting the pace. CHALICE was through early. SUBTLETY trailed all the way.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Tangler Sound. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLOWING COAL, $22.90, $10.60, $6.80; HIGH FLAG, $5.80, $2.80; SANDY BELLE, $3.30.

GLOWING COAL, allowed to settle into best stride and not hurried to the backstretch, came to the outside for racing room, circled the leaders to take command, swerved into HIGH FLAG from the whip and then drew out. HIGH FLAG was rushed to the front in the opening furlong, was rated along in front and taken back when SANDY BELLE gained command, but was coming again between when interfered with. SANDY BELLE tired after reaching the top entering the stretch. BERRY PATCH ran on the inside throughout. STAR SPECIAL went evenly. OUT OF FIRE could not better his position. MISS ALPHONSO closed gamely.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Canter. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:59. Off at 3:02½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUEL (entry), $4.90, $3.40, $2.60; STRABO, $5.90, $3.70; SEVENTH INNING, $6.70.

DUEL, away slowly, ran on own courage to the backstretch, went to the leaders with a bold rush on the outside, took command approaching the stretch turn, and easily held sway to the end. STRABO improved his position steadily after the opening quarter and hung on well under pressure. SEVENTH INNING was in the thick of contention from the beginning and showed a good effort. MELODIANA saved ground and closed resolutely. TAP ON stopped after reaching the leaders. PERFECT POOL and POST MERIDIAN closed gaps. EARLY SETTLER drew out to a good lead, but tired badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,000. The Charles L. A. Heiser Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:26½. Off at 3:27½. Winner, Mrs. J. Bosley, jr.'s, b. g. (3), by Sea Scamp—Dimlight. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $1,400; second, $350; third, $200; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 4-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:42, 1:49 2-5.

†H. D. Buck, jr.-W. Wickes entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SNOBBY SCAMP, $13.00, $3.80, $2.60; IRON ORE, $2.60, $2.30; CANPRA, $2.50.

SNOBBY SCAMP, hard ridden throughout and within striking distance of the leaders during the early running, rallied sharply when placed to a drive and closed willingly to hold IRON ORE safe. The latter was not hurried during the early running, gained with a rush when placed to drive, but hung in the final sixteenth. SIT OUT tired from setting and pressing the pace. WICKLIFFE BOY raced wide throughout. NELLA CANTER stopped. The others could not reach contention.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Southern Handicap. For all ages. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:04. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's ch. g. (3), by Stimulus—Humanity. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND DUKE (entry), $7.00, $3.50, $2.50; BILLY BEE, $4.40, $3.00; SERGT. BYRNE, $2.60.

GRAND DUKE, eased back off the pace of MARCHING HOME and SHOELESS JOE going to the far turn, was placed to energetic drive entering the stretch and easily went to the front to hold sway to the finish. BILLY BEE, forced to race wide, came with a rush in the late stretch. SERGT. BYRNE, off poorly, was kept on the inside entering the stretch and closed gamely. SHOELESS JOE tired from hustling tactics in the opening furlong. BRANNON raced wide into the stretch and rallied only mildly and can do better. MARCHING HOME quit badly from setting the pace. CHIEF CHEROKEE was close up while trailing and ran on the inside in the heaviest going all the way.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Sudbrook Park. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:31½. Winner, H. J. Bundscho's b. or br. f. (4), by Pigeon Wing II—Goldie Girl. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIRST PIGEON, $19.60, $9.60, $5.90; ACAUTAW, $8.20, $5.30; BLIND BROOK, $3.40.

FIRST PIGEON, went up on the outside to gain contention approaching the far turn, came with good speed when placed to punishment and was up in the concluding strides. ACAUTAW, forwardly placed from the beginning, finished willingly and barely missed. BLIND BROOK raced ALBUQUERQUE into defeat to take command and tired gradually when kept in the heaviest going along the rail. ALBUQUERQUE tired after setting the pace. SLEEK was hard ridden all the way and tired. TIEMPO ran on the inside all the way and went evenly. MICABIL had early speed. DARK WINTER moved up with a rush approaching the far turn and then hung. He was bumped by BRIGHT CHANCE at the break.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Gwynn Oak. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:58½. Winner, W. E. Johnson's ch. g. (4), by Star Master—Lament. Trained by C. P. Miles, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14, 1:40 4-5, 1:48.

MASTER LAD, kept on the outside in the better going throughout, came around WESTON to take command in midstretch and held sway to the end, under energetic handling. WESTON was rushed to the front at once, swung wide into the stretch and hung on willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. STAVKA tired after pressing the pace of WESTON. APPRENTICE dropped back leaving the backstretch. GOOD FLAVOR and SWIFTLET were always outrun.

Chrysler Votes $5.50 a Share, $1.50 Increase

Earnings for 9 Months Are $9.63 Against $5.35 Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Directors of Chrysler Corporation declared today a dividend of $5.50 a share on the common stock. A dividend of $4 was paid September 15. This was the largest dividned on record for the company. The payment puts $23,729,150 in the pockets of Chrysler stockholders. The dividend is payable Decmeber 14 to stockholders of record November 20.

For the first nine months the corporation earned $41,975,327, equal to $9.63 a share on the common. This compares with $23,184,457, or $5.35 in the like period of 1935.

Earnings for the first nine months were "after providing for surtax on undistributed profits on the basis of profits earned and dividends paid during the period." Indicated profits for the quarter ended September 30 were $12,501,591, or $2.80 a common share.

The dividend of $5.50 a share was larger than had been expected in many Wall Street circles. Estimates current in Wall Street today had run from $3 to $4 a share for the dividend.

The corporation sold during the first nine months 768,503 units, compared with 599,415 in the same period last year. Total sales increased to $479,819,688 from $366,711,178 in the first nine months of 1935.

Up 3⅞ in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP).—Chrysler stock responded actively today to declaration of a $5.50 dividend, selling up 3⅜ from its New York close before 1:30 p. m. Pacific time (4:30 p. m., E. S. T.), with an hour of trading to go. Sales in one 15-minute period totaled 600 shares. The stock, which closed at 135¼ in New York, opened here at 138, rose to 139, slumped half a point, then climbed to 139¼.

Companies Vote Extra Dividends

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—J. J. Newberry Co., chain store concern, declared an extra dividend of 40 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 60 cents on the common stock, both payable December 21 to stock of record December 10.

U. S. Freight Co., forwarding and shipping organization, declared an extra dividend of 75 cents and regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the capital stock. The extra is payable December 21 to stock of record December 11, and the regular December 1 to stock of record November 20.

Export Copper, Silver, Lead Prices Raised

Nonferrous Metals Gain With Increased Demand.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Metals held the center of the market stage today as export copper reached 10.90 cents a pound, a new peak since December, 1930. The price of lead was boosted while scrap copper, bar silver in London and silver futures in Montreal all advanced.

An advance of $2 a ton in lead extended the metal's rise to $6 a ton within the past fortnight and placed the market at the highest level since October, 1930. St. Joseph Lead Co. elevated the price to 5.15 cents a pound, New York, and 4.95 cents, East St. Louis. American Smelting named 5.10 cents, New York, and 4.95 cents, East St. Louis.

The upward move in silver reflected a broadened speculative interest based on yesterday's sharp rise in London bar silver and the responsive jump here of 2¾ cents to 47½ cents an ounce for so-called foreign metal. This was the first New York change in the price since May 19, last, and one of the sharpest rises since the Treasury inaugurated its silver-buying policy.

Today's cables reported London bar silver up 1 1-16 pence at 22 15-16 pence an ounce, equivalent to 50.32 cents. On the Montreal Commodity Exchange silver futures started .30 of a cent to 1.13 cents higher.

Columbian Carbon Co. Votes Extra and Bonus

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Directors of Columbian Carbon Co. today ordered payments to both shareholders and workers, the former receiving a special dividend of $1.25 a common share, plus the usual $1 quarterly, and the latter $50 each, if regularly employed since July 1.

The company has been paying $1 quarterly, and earlier this year ordered an extra disbursement of 50 cents. Both dividends are payable December 10 to stockholders of record November 20.

Armistice Day Exchange Closings

New York, Nov. 10.—All financial and commodity exchanges will be closed tomorrow, Armistice Day, November 11, with the exception of various livestock markets. Canadian security and commodity exchanges also will observe the holiday.

With the exception of the French markets, all European exchanges will be open as usual.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended November 7 totaled 51,228, an increase of 8,815 cars over the total for the same week of last year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Gold, Silver and Merchandising Shares Firm; Other Groups Yield.

New York, Nov. 10.—With a smaller turnover, around 2,750,000 shares, stocks continued in an irregular price area, but a tendency to rally in several groups appeared toward the close of trading. The market was a broad one and the feeling in the financial district remained fairly cheerful. Bonds were firm on nearly all fronts. December wheat closed half a cent lower at 114⅝ cents a bushel.

The early market was cut from the regular post-election pattern, and the first hour's trading was heavy enough to send the ticker behind. Enough stocks began at higher prices to give the trading a strong tone, but the higher prices soon called out stock and irregularity was the rule during the greater part of the day. A few stocks that were eagerly sought and which were favored with specialists' books with scanty selling orders, moved up sharply.

Silver stocks again were popular, the market apparently taking much stock in the ability of Pittman and the silver Senator group to persuade the Government to give them another rakeoff from the Treasury. United States Smelting was the leader and American Smelting was buoyant, reaching 100, while the price of silver in London rose. At the best the gains ranged from 1 to 5 points. Coppers were dull.

Metals Harden.

Silver shares were about the only downright inflationary spot in the trading. Mercantile stocks, looking to a brisk holiday trade, drew an increasing speculative attention. Railroad shares did well and the equipment stocks advanced on the much-discussed surge of replacement demand expected from the transportation industry. Motor shares, somewhat overbulled lately, did little. General Motors opened lower and failed to regain yesterday's level; Chrysler also was held down by profit taking.

Gold stocks hardened and the mail orders ran up with other merchants. Favorites were Homestake, Dome, McIntyre, Macy, Best, Kresge, Allied Stores and Safeway. Spiegel May Stern was strong. Steel shares failed to get anywhere, and were less active. Public utilities were touched up a bit by the spurt in American Telephone to a new high price. North American and Electhe Power hardened, but most of the others in the group were weaker.

Evening up of trading positions over the holiday contributed something to the irregularity of stock prices, and perhaps also a trace of satiety with the daily reports of extra dividend payments, bonuses to workers, and the like may be found. It is now well established that 1936 has brought definite business improvement, and the consensus among informed people is that sufficient arrearages of demand for goods and services of many kinds exists as to insure business recovery for another year at least, in spite of politics.

Recovery Tide Running.

That expected demand is to come from the replenishment of stocks allowed to run down in the depression years, from an attempt to catch up with repairs and improvements so long neglected, with modernization of plant (especially in the public utility field), and the building up of an adequate supply of equipment by the railroads. Efforts to catch up to what by this time would have been the normal line of repairs, replacements and improvements will be aided by an assured large supply of cheap money, and by an ample supply of labor, if it can be induced to work after four years of idling on the dole.

With that as a foundation for business activity, the superstructure probably will be built higher because of the distribution among consumers of more money, from Government and from corporation sources. More men are being put to work, and the wage scale is rising. Government policy plainly is directed at a further uplift in wages. The problem for the investor to solve is whether profits can be maintained to keep pace with expanded gross revenues in the face of mounting labor costs and taxation. Pessimists feel that there is real danger the recovery will be overtaken and stopped by those adverse currents.

Banking Position.

Some large scale switching seemed to be going on from bank stocks into industrial and other shares. At any rate, the bank share market, which first failed to go up when other shares did, and then started to sag slowly while other stocks were at their strongest, was in bad odor this morning, and a rush to get out of it began. The break in their prices was the worst in several weeks, losses ranging from 2 to 20 points. Morning newspaper headlines, which chronicled the efforts of the RFC to collect $12,500,000 from stockholders of the Dawes bank in Chicago, the thinly veiled criticisms of the banking system contained in the FDIC report, and the gloom felt by central bankers at Basle over world stabilization accord prospects, were factors which had a bad psychological effect. Moreover, the fear of long continued easy money, to which banks have adjusted themselves, continues potent.

Business Loans.

For the second week in succession the commercial and miscellaneous loan figures of weekly reporting member banks in leading cities decreased slightly, suggesting that the peak of such lending has been passed for the season and that some contraction may be witnessed in coming weeks. The shrinkage in the week of November 4 was $14,000,000, of which $10,000,000 was in this district. In the previous week most of the contraction was at Cleveland, with a nominal increase reported here. Since so many things besides business loans are lumped into the "all other loan" item, it is impossible to draw conclusions until changes in the published totals become larger and more generally distributed.

Investments.

The reporting banks continued to lose Government securities, probably selling to the market, the decrease for the week being $24,000,000 in direct obligations and $4,000,000 in the guaranteed issues. New York and Richmond banks accounted for the whole liquidation. Other securities were down $47,000,000, of which $39,000,000 was in this district. This shrinkage reflected the redemption of some large State and municipal obligations. Deposits were down sharply, mainly because of first of month currency, pay roll, dividend and interest payments. Demand deposits were down $134,000,000, time deposits shrank $23,000,000 and Government deposits $78,000,000. Deposit balances of banks with other banks rose $146,000,000. Reserves were down $66,000,000.

Income Gains 73%; Living Cost Up 20%

But Income Is 38% Under 1929 With Only 15.1% Drop in Expense.

New York, Nov. 10.—The cost of living in the United States rose in September to the highest level for the current inflationary movement, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. It was 3.9 per cent higher than a year ago and 19.8 per cent higher than at the low for the depression in April, 1933. At the same time the cost of living in September was 15.1 per cent below the predepression peak in October, 1929.

The rise in the cost of living since the low for the depression has not resulted in any widespread resentment because the average per capita income of the people of the United States has shown a much greater increase. Thus, the per capita income in August of the present year, which is the latest figure available, was 73.0 per cent higher than in April, 1933, as compared with the rise of 19.8 per cent in the cost of living during approximately the same period.

From the standpoint of income, however, the cost of living at the present time is considerably higher than in the year prior to the depression. Per capita income in August was 38.0 per cent lower than in October, 1929 as against the decrease of only 15.1 per cent in the cost of living.

Steel Corp. Shipments Peak for Six Years

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—U. S. Steel Corporation announced today shipments of finished steel products by subsidiaries in October totaled 1,007,417 tons, an increase of 45,614 from the September figure, and the largest October total since 1929.

October was the first month in which the big steel producer's shipment tonnage had crossed the million-ton mark since May, 1930. Shipments in October, 1929, were 1,242,120 tons.

Preferred Utilities Decline From High

The Distributors Group index of 33 public utility operating companies preferred stock prices closed on November 7 at 88.23 compared with 89.37 on October 24 and 90.25 on October 10.

The October 10 figure of 90.25 represented the high point reached in the current bull market which began in July, 1932.

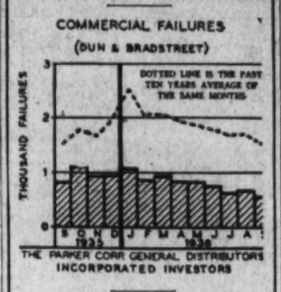
Failures One-Sixth Of Peak in 1932



Boston, Nov. 10.—A record low for business crashes since 1919 is what the September figures show. The number of business failures was at its height in January, 1932, while in September of this year failures were close to one-sixth of their depression high.

Home Building Up 45 Per Cent

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Home building in October jumped 45 per cent over the figure for October last year, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today. Residential construction started during the month in 37 Eastern States totaled $79,736,200, compared with $55,100,300 in 1935.

For all classes of construction the October figure was $225,839,900, against $200,595,700 for the same month in 1935. Total volume of construction of all types in the 37 States reported for the 10 months ended October 31 was placed at $2,267,468,100, compared with $1,392,293,400 in the comparable period last year, an increase of 63 per cent.

Urbana Paper Co. Increases Wages

Urbana, Ohio, Nov. 10 (AP).—A 10 per cent increase for 100 employes of the Urbana plant of the United Paperboard Co. became effective today.

Supt. Harry S. Cutler announced the increase and said it also would be effected at other plants of the company in New York State.

Daily Oil Output Drops 74,996 Bbls.

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 10 (AP).—A drop of 74,996 barrels daily in the Nation's production of oil, bringing the total to 2,066,530 barrels daily for the week ended November 7, was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal.

Corn Slumps With Receipts From Farmers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Downturns of almost 2 cents a bushel, maximum, in corn values today resulted largely from indications that rural holders were showing more willingness to sell. Bookings of corn to arrive in Chicago were of more liberal volume today than at any time heretofore since September.

Corn closed nervous, rather above the day's bottom level, but ⅝@1⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, December 101⅛@101⅞, May new 95, July, new, 91⅝@91¾; wheat ⅛ to ⅝ down, December, 114⅝@114¾; May, new 112½@112⅝; July, 98½; oats unchanged to ¼ off, December 42⅞, and showing ⅝ to 1 cent decline; December, 85⅝@85¾. Prospects for Crops Improve in October.

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that crop prospects for the country as a whole improved about 2 per cent during October. Crop estimates were slightly higher than a month ago for corn, potatoes, sweet potatoes, apples, tobacco, peanuts, sugar beets and buckwheat. A 7 per cent improvement in cotton was reported previously.

The esimate placed the corn crop at 1,526,627,000 bushels, an improvement of about 1 per cent over a month ago and 3 per cent above 1934 production but 500,000,000 below production in any other season since the drought of 1901.

The 1935 corn production was 2,291,629,000, while the 1928-1932 average was 2,553,424 bushels.

Prison Break Given Long Terms

Lumberton, N. C., Nov. 10 (AP)—Judge R. Hunt Parker today gave long prison terms to four bandits for a holdup robbery that netted them $6.41.

Paul Edwards and Arnold Scott, alleged ringleaders in a Norfolk, Va., jail delivery and in the holdup, were sentenced to serve 12 to 20 years at hard labor, and Clifton W. Hollowell and C. E. Smith, 8 to 12 years.

Judge Parker sentenced the men after criminal records from the United States Department of Justice were submitted in court today and Police Chief Vance McGill testified to admissions made by the defendants.

The four pleaded guilty yesterday to robbing the Lumberton Western Union office October 26, less than 12 hours after they overpowered a guard and escaped from a Norfolk (Va.) Jail.

Proposals

PROCUREMENT DIVISION, PUBLIC Buildings Branch, Washington, D. C., Oct. 31, 1936—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 1 p. m., Dec. 15, 1936, for construction (except elevators) of the Apex Building at Washington, D. C. Attention is directed to the special conditions of bidding set forth in the specification and in bulletin no. 51 (revised) of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. Upon application, three sets of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications MUST be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $25 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, U. S. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to have them available for any sub-contractor or material firm interested, and to guarantee surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if such sets are not returned or when they have accomplished their purpose. W. E. REYNOLDS, Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Buildings Branch. 7.9.11

Policemen End $400 Odyssey Of 2 Children

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—The odyssey of two little girls with $4,000 to spend ended today on an extremely low note—a ride to a Brooklyn police station in a radio squad car, a scolding, and punishment that probably will consist of saying extra prayers for many a day to come.

Blithe as you please, 12-year-old Mary Coyle, a pert little blonde Irish miss, picked up $4,080 from a dresser in the home of her married sister, Mrs. May Coyle Lydon, in Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, gathered up her chum, Mary "Toy" Grinnell, 11, and started out to see the world.

The money was the cash payment of the insurance of Mary's father, who died recently.

Note in Garbage Pail.

First they left a note in the Lydon garbage pail.

"We are going to take a train and be away a long time," it said.

Then they went to the movies to see Shirley Temple, and as police radios warned all officers to be on the lookout for them, slept peacefully all night in the hall of a tenement house on Seventh avenue in Brooklyn.

Bright and early they were off this morning.

At a department store they bought suitcases, red slippers, red dresses and high-heeled shoes "like grown-ups wear." They visited a friend of Mary's sister, emptied the suitcases and started out again.

Gather in Lingeries.

But on the way back, up drove Patrolmen Nathan Cooperman and James Soleska in a squad car, full of suspicion.

"Look out, Lil," said Mary. "I'm afraid of these men. Look how big they are."

Her worst fears were justified. They readily admitted their identity and rode to the station. Of the $4,080, there was but $.690 left. They took their scolding in children's court and went back home, and to school again.

Nazi Paper Would Ban Sigrid Undset's Books

Berlin, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Westdeutscher Beobachter, official Nazi organ, asserted today the writings of Sigrid Undset, Danish novelist, should "disappear from the columns of German newspapers, from German libraries and from book stores."

"Frau Undset has betrayed the heartfelt hospitality she enjoyed in our cultural life," the Westdeutscher Beobachter added. "She did not deserve the veneration which was accorded her by wide circles of our people."

Eugene O'Neill May Win Nobel Literature Prize

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Well-informed Swedish sources today said Eugene O'Neill, the playwright, probably would be chosen for the 1936 Nobel literature award. The award is to be announced Thursday.

It also was reported the physics prize would be awarded to two scientists, one of them Carl David Anderson, of Pasadena, Calif.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, Ohio, Nov. 10.—The Tall Corn State produced another national corn-husking champion today when Carl Carlson, of Audubon County, Iowa, brother of the 1935 winner, sloshed his way to victory in a field half knee-deep in mud.

The 18 contestants, 2 from each of the major corn-producing States, were forced to toil in practically a mud lake. Three days of rain and an 8-inch snow which melted last week made footing precarious.

The State highway patrol estimated that 125,000 to 150,000 spectators swarmed over the Alva L. Oyler farm, 13 miles southwest of Newark, to witness the battle of the bangboards.

Carlson, 38, started the 80-minute husk grind using what might be termed a steady 1-2-3-4 hand and wrist movement. The first two movements stripped the husk from the corn, No. 3 twisted the corn from the stalk and No. 4 shot the ear against the bang board to fall into his wagon. Toward the end of the contest, Carlson, seemingly trained to physical perfection, speeded up and was averaging an ear a second when the finish bomb exploded.

Carlson was credited with picking 21,039 bushels. This was only about half the amount younger brother, Elmer, picked to win the 1935 contest at Newtown, Ind. A poor stand of corn, small ears for the most part, and the muddy condition of the field were attributed as the principal causes of the low bushelage.

Four Men Are Killed As Train Strikes Auto

Clinton, Ill., Nov. 10 (AP).—Four men were killed near here today when their automobile was struck at a grade crossing by the Illinois Central "Green Diamond"—speed train operating between St. Louis and Chicago.

The dead, all residents of Waynesville, Ill., were George Cisco, Orval Cisco, his son, Elijah Cisco, nephew of George, and Robert Edwards.

Population of Japan Gains Million in Year

Japan proper had a population of about 70,150,000, of which about a third was centered in urban settlements, the report said. The census showed there were approximately 190,000 more men than women. The population of Tokyo alone exceeded 6,000,000.

Capital Draft Urged.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP).—Harry W. Colmery, of Topeka, national commander of the American Legion, said today "conscription for capital and labor in wartime as well as for the man on the firing line is the best guarantee of peace ever devised."

Juliana to Receive Palace From Queen

Amsterdam, the Netherlands, Nov. 10 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina will give a palace as a wedding present to Crown Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld, who are to be married January 7.

The palace is Soestdyk, originally presented to the Prince of Orange by the States of the Netherlands. It will be modernized and refurnished as part of the wedding gift of the nation.

Leader Insists Police Protect Marine Pickets

Warns Workers Will Aid Selves If Not Guarded; Violence Flares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—The first outbreak of violence in New York's 10-day-old maritime strike today brought a warning from Strike Leader Joseph Curran that his men will be forced to protect themselves unless they receive adequate police protection.

After the slashing of Robert Darlington, 28, who was on the picket line in front of the Eastern Steamship Co.'s pier, Curran said:

"We insist we will do our utmost in maintaining peace and order on the waterfront, but if our men do not receive the necessary protection we will be forced to protect ourselves."

Two waiters employed on the Eastern Steamship liner Acadia were arrested in connection with the assault on Darlington, who was not seriously wounded.

Curran, who claimed the strike had tied up 247 vessels and affected 18,220 men in Atlantic and gulf ports, said the walkout was becoming more effective every day.

Blames "Scab" Crew.

A minor collison between the Grace liner Santa Barbara and the Peninsula & Occidental liner Cuba in Havana Harbor during the day was said by Curran to have been due "no doubt" to what he described as an "inexperienced, scab crew" aboard the Santa Barbara.

"We trust," Curran said on learning of the mishap, "that it will not be necessary for accidents of more serious proportions to occur before ship owners will agree to meet with us and discuss the just demands of the strikers."

Their demands will be presented at a mass meeting called for Thursday night. The demands, similar to those being pressed on the Pacific Coast, are for a union hiring hall, cash for overtime and an eight-hour day.

Strike leaders announced the entire crew of the Grace liner Santa Maria, numbering 141, joined the strike when the ship docked this morning from Valparaiso.

U. S. Efforts Endangered.

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP).—Complications threatened today to swamp the Government's new peace efforts in the maritime strike while the walkout further extended its strangle hold on American shipping.

Assistant Secretary of Labor E. F. McGrady met with a group of shipowners to arrange a resumption of projected peace negotiations with the unions, but left the conference without making a statement.

A spokesman for the Federal Maritime Commission, which recessed its strike inquiry to give the right-of-way to the peace negotiations, indicated it was planning to resume hearings Thursday.

Moors Must Capture Spanish Banks for Pay

Barcelona, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The Spanish rebels have discovered an ingenious method of paying—without paying—their mercenaries on the Aragon front, according to reports reaching here. Instead of cash, the rebel authorities often give checks drawn on imaginary banks in villages which still are in loyalist hands.

Thus the Moors are encouraged to capture the places in the hope of cashing their checks.

It is a "cash on delivery" system. But the deliveries, according to reports, are more frequent than the cash.

Baby 'Refuses' Poison.

Oakville, Man., Nov. 10 (AP).—Two-year-old Solomon Gross was alive tonight because he didn't like the taste of pills his brothers tried to get him to eat. The brothers, Michael, 4, and Jonathan, 3, died. An autopsy showed the pills contained poison. Solomon told his parents he "spit 'em out" because he didn't like the taste.

Founds Poetry Fund.

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Establishment of a $5,000 foundation at the University of Chicago for the "Advancement and Encouragement of Poetry" was provided in the will of Harriet Monroe, founder of Poetry Magazine, who died in South America September 26, it was disclosed today as the will was filed for probate. Value of the 76-year-old poet's estate was estimated by Attorney Charles H. Hamill at $30,000.
